NEW YORK, June 25.—At least 48 persons were killed and more than 40 injured this afternoon when a two-car train plunged from the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit elevated structure at Fifth and Flatbush avenues in Brooklyn and were crushed.

The cars crashed to the street and were carried with them a mass of high tension electric wires and poles, spilling blue flame, ignited the shattered wreckage of the old wooden cars. Firemen, fighting amid terrified and screaming passengers, checked the flames.

Two autos crushed underneath the wreckage, went with the first truck of the wreckage and it plunged over the side of the structure, dragging the car with it. Part of the structure fell, falling the car crushed two automobiles beneath it.

Two dozen ambulances, all available fire apparatus and police reinforcements were on the scene in a few minutes. They were forced to fight a crowd of several thousand which was quickly massed.

Four of the dead were women. The first identified dead were Alexander Lowmy and Mrs. Louise Wright, both of Brooklyn. Women tossed aside their helmets and rubber garments and plunged into the wreckage, tearing at the seams with their hands, when axes and saws could not be used without endangering the injured.

8 MORE SHIPS CARRYING LIQUOR REACH NEW YORK

U. S. Officials Preparing to Move on Six That Came In During Week End When Two More Dock.

SUPPLIES OF ITALIAN LINER NOT UNDER SEAL

Vessel Had Left Home Port Too Late to Adopt Practice of French and British Steamers.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Two more "wet" liners steamed into port today while Government officials were preparing to move on six other vessels which had docked over the week-end with liquor transported over the three-mile line in defiance of the Treasury Department's dry ruling. The latest arrivals were the Anchor liner Tuscania and the French liner Suffren.

The Tuscania, arriving from Glasgow, brought a relatively small store. Seven dozen bottles of Scotch were the largest individual item. Eighty-nine bottles of assorted drinks made up the rest of the cache bearing British Government seals. The Suffren was more heavily laden. She brought from Havre, in addition to a slight stock marked "medical supplies," 1101 bottles of wines, 821 bottles of champagne, 55 bottles of gin, 15 bottles of rum and nine bottles of whiskey. The stock was under French Government seal.

Surveyor of the Port White announced that the United States Government would follow its initial step in the case of the Baltic and seize in excess of medical requirements as fast as ships arrived.

Removal Under Way. Customs men shortly before noon began removing the seized liquor stores from the British liner Benicaria. The party was led by Deputy Surveyor Colman.

Four transatlantic liners which docked yesterday with liquor were: The White Star liner Cedric, the Cunard liner Caronia, the Italian liner Conte Verdi, making her maiden trip to the United States, and the French liner Providence.

No attempt was made by authorities yesterday to seize the liquor stores.

The manifest of the Cedric from Liverpool showed the following wet stocks: 7931 bottles of ale and stout; 1156 gallons of wine, 60 gallons of spirits, 65-6 gallons of liquors and cordials.

The Caronia's sealed supply consisted of 3116 bottles of ale and stout, 48 gallons of wine, 47 gallons of spirits, and her medical stores were listed at 23 gallons of wine and four gallons of spirits.

The Providence, from Marseilles brought 2694 bottles of wine for passengers and 70 bottles for the crew, 127 bottles of cognac and rum, 90 bottles of whiskey and gin, 353 bottles of champagne, 214 bottles of liquors and 30 barrels of beer.

All of the Cedric's liquor supply was listed as "surplus medical stores" and officers of the ship said it had been sealed by crown customs authorities before sailing from England.

It was said that the Conte Verdi carried 2000 gallons of wine not under seal. The wine was asserted to be the amount required under Italian laws for medicinal purposes for the crew and third-class passengers. The ship sailed from Naples on June 13, too late to adopt the practice of French and English liners in placing liquor stores under seal.

America Within Her Rights in Seizing Ship Liquors, Lloyd George Says.

LONDON, June 25.—Addressing a large congregation in the Welsh Baptist Chapel here yesterday, former Premier David Lloyd George made it apparent that he did not share the views of certain British newspapers concerning the lack of right of the American authorities to seize British liquor stores aboard ships.

"I hope we won't get excited over the seizure of liquor in New York harbor," said Lloyd George. "It is not merely that America seems to be well within her rights, but I think we ought to extend a certain measure of sympathy to her in her difficulties. It is not a question whether we are or are not prohibitionists. But America is making a very bold experiment to deal with probably the greatest curse of modern civilization. She has tried many experiments, but they have been only comparative successes."

Decision Made With Courage. "She has made the decision with the courage that characterizes that great people to try the prohibition experiment—one that has never been

THIRD DEATH FROM AUTO ACCIDENT IN PRESIDENT'S PARTY

Thomas F. Dawson, Colorado 'L'orian, Succumbs to Injuries Received in Wreck.

DONALD A. CRAIG LIKELY TO RECOVER

Summer Car's, Representing Republican. Comm. Sec. and Tommie French, Driver, Killed in Plunge.

DENVER, June 25.—Thomas F. Dawson, Colorado State Historian, and nationally known newspaper man, died at 4:40 this morning in a Denver hospital, the third victim of the automobile accident in Bear Creek Canyon yesterday. Dawson was with the group of newspaper men in President Harding's party.

Summer Curtis, representative of the Republican National Committee, accompanying the Harding party, and for many years a widely known newspaper correspondent, and Tommie French, a statistician for the Great Western Sugar Co. of Denver, who was driving the car, were killed yesterday when the automobile went off the road and fell 75 feet into the creek bed.

Craig Expected to Recover. Donald A. Craig, manager of the Washington Bureau of the New York Herald, was injured. Craig suffered a badly lacerated scalp, a bruised shoulder and a broken arm. Early today it was said at the hospital that he would recover unless complications developed.

Dawson suffered a broken ankle, bruised shoulders and scalp lacerations. The car was rounding Looking Glass curve, one of the sharp bends in the road, when it was seen to serve and crash through a retaining wall and plunge into the creek. A broken steering knuckle is believed to have caused the accident.

Curtis was pinned beneath the car and Craig was thrown clear. French was found a few feet from the wrecked automobile and Dawson about 50 feet down the incline. French was alive when other members of the party reached the victims, but died before he could be brought here.

President Greatly Shocked.

President Harding was greatly shocked when informed of the accident. "I am unutterably distressed that such an accident should have occurred," he said. "It lays a sorrow upon what has been a happy trip. My regret is beyond expression."

The body of Curtis will be taken to Chicago where it will be met by friends and taken probably to Washington for burial.

Roy Roberts, representing the Kansas City Star on the tour, will remain in Denver to see with Craig until Mrs. Craig arrives from New York.

Car Was Rounding Curve. The automobile carrying the four men was one of 10 machines which had carried them to the present location. The car was carrying the correspondents with the presidential party and of Denver newspapers. To a luncheon given by the Press Club at the top of Lookout Mountain. After the luncheon the party motored over Genesee Mountain and was proceeding down Bear Creek Canyon when the accident occurred.

The machine was not going more than 15 miles an hour as the roadway at that point was crowded with cars going in an opposite direction.

Similar Accident in 1919 to Group in Wilson Party.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Summer Curtis, killed today in an automobile accident near Denver, entered Washington newspaper work a number of years ago as the representative of a Milwaukee paper. He served here as correspondent of the Chicago Record Herald. For a time he was connected with the Red Cross organization here, leaving a few months ago to become associated with the Republican National Committee.

Donald Craig became head of the New York Herald bureau here in 1913 after serving with the Washington staff of that paper for several years. His first newspaper experience was received on Washington papers.

Thomas Dawson spent a number of years in Washington. At one time he was a member of the editorial staff of the Associated Press during most of the Wilson administration. He served as executive clerk of the Senate, later acting as the Washington correspondent of the Christian

CHURCH RETARDED BY EXCLUSIVENESS, DR. DAY CHARGES

Retiring Pastor of Messiah Congregation Says He Worked 24 Years in Vain Against Social Barrier.

SAYS A "CLOSED FEW" RULED ORGANIZATION

Compares Removal, After His Long Service, to Relieving a Captain on the Battlefield.

The Rev. Dr. John W. Day, in his farewell sermon yesterday, ending his 24 years' pastorate of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, Union boulevard and Enright avenue, said that a spirit of exclusiveness had hampered the growth of the congregation, and that too much power had been exercised by the trustees.

These statements were taken, by some of his hearers, as Dr. Day's reply to criticisms, based on numerical comparisons, which are said to have figured in the terminating of his pastoral relation. The decision to give Dr. Day a year's leave of absence, with salary, which should end his pastorate, was reached by the trustees several weeks ago, and was made known to the membership after the trustees had notified Dr. Day of their decision.

Dr. Day, in his sermon, alluded to the manner of his removal by comparing himself to "a captain relieved of his command on the field of battle."

Refers to St. Chrysostom. Speaking of the effect of the church's reputation for exclusiveness in preventing a growth in the membership, Dr. Day said, "If a Chrysostom had been in the pulpit, it is probable that the church would have become permanently connected with the church." (St. John Chrysostom was the "golden-tongued" preacher of the Eastern Church, in the fourth century.)

Regarding the church's control exercised by the trustees, and its effect upon the membership, Dr. Day said: "The open pew is incompatible with the closed church. Church management cannot be dependent on congregational support and independent of it at the same time. A church cannot long remain half free and half unfree. In most other Unitarian churches, the trustees can take no important action without the consent of the congregation. I know of no other Unitarian church in which the congregation can take no important action without the consent of the trustees. There will always be faulty working, always difficult cleavage, always slender membership until this chain upon progress is removed."

Dr. Day, in the farewell sermon, reviewed the 24 years of his pastorate. Among the pastors of the West End churches, the Rev. Edmund Duckworth of the Church of the Redeemer is the only one who has served longer than Dr. Day. Dr. Day, who came here from Massachusetts, succeeded the Rev. Dr. John Snider, the church being then at Garrison avenue and Lexington street. The church was then in the Home of the present location came seven years after Dr. Day began his pastorate.

He spoke in detail of his activities in public matters, both in peace and in wartime. One branch of his service, his work for the betterment of negroes, was attested to by the presence of a group of negroes at the farewell service.

Was Racecraft Foe. Among activities which he mentioned were opposition to racecraft gambling, opposition to the negro segregation ordinance, advocacy of compulsory education and the Juvenile Court, wartime Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. work, preaching and the mission of the Friends and the Mission Free School conducting religious services at Washington University, and social service work in connection with the Community Council, the Neighborhood Association and the Provident Association.

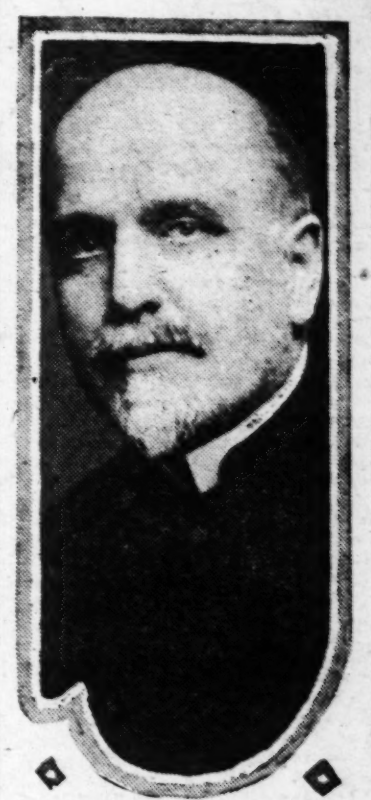

He told of his efforts to increase the membership, and to make particular in the work and responsibility of the congregation more general. He then came to the matter of the church's exclusiveness, of which he said:

"There has been one cause of reproach from the first year of my pastorate until the present day, the one great obstacle to realization of my hopes of enlarged constituency has been the impression everywhere manifested that this was an exclusive church in which all sorts and conditions of people could not find congenial places."

"At first I supposed that this was

PASSENGERS ON WABASH TRAIN TWICE WRECKED

Travelers From Detroit, Transferred, Encounter Second Accident—Three Trainmen Hurt.

Passengers on Wabash passenger train No. 3, from Detroit and Toledo to St. Louis, due in Union Station at 7:58 a. m. today, were in two wrecks within about seven hours this morning.

The first was at 12:30 a. m. when the locomotive and ten cars were derailed near Delphi, Ind., apparently the result of a loose or broken rail. No one was injured, so far as reports to headquarters here show, but the train was annulled and through passengers were transferred to train No. 9, due here at 1:30 p. m.

The locomotive of No. 9 collided with a locomotive of a northbound train of the C. & E. I. at Danville, Ill., at 7:55 this morning. The report to headquarters of the second wreck states that both engines were derailed.

An Associated Press dispatch from Danville named three Wabash trainmen among the injured, as follows: George Maloney, Peru, Ind., engineer, hurt about back and legs; J. M. Jackson, cook, 229 Morgan street, St. Louis, scalded about hips and legs.

W. M. Jones, St. Louis, second cook; jaw broken and teeth knocked out.

Another engine was provided for train No. 9 which then proceeded toward St. Louis.

PRESIDENT PLEADS FOR UNIVERSAL PROHIBITION IN SPEECH AT DENVER

Calls Proposed Abandonment by State of Part in Enforcing Law a "Curious Illustration of Loose Thinking" and Political Blunder.

SAYS NO PARTY WILL URGE REPEAL OF 18th AMENDMENT

Ask That People Cease Patronizing Bootleggers and Virtually Requests That Use of Private Stocks Be Discontinued.

By CHARLES G. ROSS, Chief Washington Correspondent of Post-Dispatch With the President on His Tour.

DENVER, Colo., June 25.—President Harding, in a speech here today on law enforcement, lashed out vigorously at the policy of "nullification" of the eighteenth amendment, denounced those individuals who encourage the bootlegger by their patronage, and called upon state and individuals alike to make the prohibition laws effective.

The President did not name New York, or "Al" Smith, but everybody knew that he had in mind the Governor's approval of the New York act repealing the State enforcement code.

It was not a speech calculated to give any encouragement to the weak. It was, indeed, a decidedly "dry" speech—dry only in the one sense that it had more snap in it than any other of the set addresses made thus far on his trip.

"I am making my appeal in this matter to the broadest and best sentiments of law-abiding Americans everywhere," said the President. "We must recognize that there are some people on both sides of this question in whose minds it is absolutely paramount. Some would be willing to sacrifice every other consideration of policy in order to have their own way as to this one. This constitutes one of the most demoralizing factors in the situation."

"Example of Law Defiance." "Many citizens, not teetotalers in their habits, lawfully acquired stores of private stocks in anticipation of prohibition, pending the ratification of the amendment and the enactment of the regulatory law. Many others have had no scruple in seeking supplies from those who vend in defiance of the law. The latter practice is rather too costly to be indulged by the masses, so there are literally American millions who resent the lawful possession of the few, the lawless practices of a few more, and rebel against the denial to the vast majority Universal prohibition in the United States would occasion far less discontent than partial prohibition and partial indulgence."

"It is the partial indulgence which challenges the majesty of law, but the greater crime is the impairment of the moral fiber of the republic. The resentful millions have the example of law defiance by those who can afford to buy, and are reckless enough to take the risk and there is incalculable a contempt for law which may some day find expression in far more serious form."

"I do not see how any citizen who cherishes the protection of law in organized society may feel himself secure when he himself is the victim of contempt for law. Clearly there is call for awakened conscience and awakened realization of true self-interest on the part of the few who will themselves suffer most if the law is not enforced. The law is not a mere formality, and passion is expressed in destructive lawlessness. Ours must be a law-abiding republic, and reverence and obedience must spring from the influential and the leaders among men, as well as obedience from the humblest citizen, else the temple will collapse."

Supremacy of Law Menaced. "Whatever satisfaction there may be in indulgence, whatever objection there is to the so-called invasion of personal liberty, neither counts when the supremacy of law and the stability of our institutions are menaced. With all good intentions, the majority sentiment of the United States has sought by law to remove strong drink as a curse upon the American citizen but ours is a larger problem now to remove lawless drink as a menace to the Republic itself."

The President argued for exercise of powers to enforce the "dry" laws. "The very basis of our political establishment," as said, "is the idea of a Cuius est solum, the idea of the state and the nation; the idea of concurrent authority and concurrent responsibility."

He expressed the conviction that only a small and "a greatly mistaken" minority believed the eighteenth amendment would ever be repealed. "Undoubtedly," he said, "there would be changes in the details of enforcement policy, but these changes would represent the sincere purpose of effective enforcement, rather than moderation of the general policy."

The President declared that if the enforcement of prohibition continued to be thrown on the Federal Government, the result would be the creation of a Federal policy of authority that would "come to be regarded as an intrusion" on local authority.

Abandonment of State Powers. "It is a curious illustration of loose thinking," he said, "that some people have proposed as a means of protecting the fullest rights of the states that the states should abandon their part in enforcing the prohibitory policy. That means simply an invitation to the Federal Government to exercise powers which should be exercised by the states. Instead of being a result of state rights, it is an abandonment of them; it is an abdication, it amounts to a confession by the State that it doesn't choose to govern itself, but prefers to turn the task of a considerable part of it over to the Federal authority. There could be no more complete negation of state rights."

"The national Government has been uniformly considerate of the liberties of the states about their rights and authorities. But when a state deliberately refuses to exercise the powers which the Constitution expressly confers on it, it obviously commits itself to a policy of nullification of the Federal authority, the end of which we are reluctant to conjecture."

"Historic Political Blunder." The spectacle of a state nullifying its own authority was described by the President as something "new." He predicted that the "new nullification" would find that they had committed one of the historic blunders in political management. He predicted also that neither of the present parties, within the lives of present voters, would declare openly for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The question was only kept in politics, he added, by "the almost fanatical agency of the minority of extremists on both sides."

When the President arose to speak a large American flag above him was unfurled, letting down upon him a shower of crimson roses.

Gov. Roosevelt aroused applause by declaring in a welcoming speech, that "the time for American membership in World Court has come," and that the "people of this nation are glad that you (the President) are anxious to put this question above partisanship and rest it upon the finer foundations of justice and humanity."

The Municipal Auditorium, where the President spoke, with a capacity of 12,000, was filled, and many persons stood in the galleries.

GOLDEN RULE IS THEME OF SERMON BY THE PRESIDENT

In an Informal Talk at Colorado Springs He Declares America Needs More Religious Devotion.

VISITS VETERANS IN DENVER HOSPITAL

Tells Them That if He Has His Way Dollars Will Be Conscribed in Next War.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., June 25.—Burdened with grief over the tragedy of yesterday, which resulted in the death of one member of his party and of a Denver host, and the injury of two persons with the party, President Harding today faced his program with a heavy heart.

The program included a parade through the city, a greeting of school children at the State House, a formal address at the Auditorium and a visit to Cheyenne, Wyo., later in the day, where another address is to be delivered.

Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, joined the party in Denver and will go through the Alaskan itinerary with the President.

Talks to Veterans.

President Harding's first official act after his arrival here yesterday was to assure the soldier sick at the Army's General Hospital that he would keep "everlastingly at it" to see that full justice was meted out by the Government to its wounded and needy veterans of the World War and would "consecrate" himself, his every influence and endeavor, to prevent another war on the part of the United States.

"But," Mr. Harding said, addressing a group who assembled to welcome him and Mrs. Harding to the hospital, "I want to tell you if ever there is another war, we will do more than that. We will do it. I have anything to do with it, we will draft every dollar and every other essential."

To the sick in the wards, the President also gave a word of cheer while Mrs. Harding went from cot to cot, handing each patient a flower and leaving a message of love and good wishes as she passed on. One pale-faced soldier who had lost both limbs, told the first lady, in answer to her solicitations, that he "was all right and feeling fine." His wife, who sat beside the cot, said "Jack tells all the visitors that, but then, he was always a good sport."

The President and Mrs. Harding were up early yesterday to enjoy the scenery as their train traveled up through Colorado to Denver, but the habitants of almost half a dozen little towns had arisen even earlier and had congregated about the stations to see the visitors, but then, he had missed seeing those who arose so early to greet him as well as inhabitants of several little Kansas towns, who stayed up until 1 and 2 a. m. to see the train pass through and was expressed by the executive, who explained that "even the President has to sleep some time."

Several hundred persons were gathered about the train at Colorado Springs when the train arrived a few minutes before 7 o'clock and the President, with a mention of it being Sunday morning, said he wished he could preach a sermon, adding that it was in his heart to do it.

"I tell you, my countrymen, the world needs more of the Christ," he said. "The world needs the spirit of the man of Nazareth." He then continued:

"If we could bring into the relationship of humanity, among ourselves and among the nations of the earth, brotherhood that was taught by the Christ, we would have a restored world; we would have little or none of war, and we would have a new hope for humanity throughout the globe. There never was a greater lesson taught than that of the Golden Rule. If we could faithfully observe that, I would be willing to wipe out the remainder of the commandments."

"I should like to say further that if we are going to make of this

CROWDS FAIL TO RESPOND TO HARDING'S SPEECHES, BUT LIKE HIS PERSONALITY

His Work in Kansas Wheat Field Said To "Have Taken Curse" Off Hutchinson Speech—Informal Talks Strike Home.

BY CHARLES G. ROSS, Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch With the President on His Tour.

DENVER, Colo., June 25.—The genial personality of Warren G. Harding has "gone over big" during his first five days of his Alaskan trip; the set speeches of President Harding have done him no political good.

It would be going too far to say that the speeches have fallen altogether flat, for at some points or other in each of them there has been generous, though hardly over-voiced, applause. Where, however, it has nearly always been for some political safe and sane, platitude, or some point of the speech outside the main argument.

Thus at St. Louis the crowd rose to his declaration against war, but not to his involved argument for a self-perpetuating world court, or what the President said in regard to the waterways got a good hand, but his plea for the railway consolidation plan was heard in silence; and at Hutchinson his remarks about the waterways got a good hand, but his plea for the railway consolidation plan was heard in silence; and at Hutchinson his remarks about the waterways got a good hand, but his plea for the railway consolidation plan was heard in silence.

In each of the three places the heat may have had something to do with the lack of enthusiasm for what the President said, but an observer put it, he was talking, especially at Hutchinson, to "wilted lettuce."

In St. Louis and Kansas City, moreover, he was faced with a real hostility toward the particular measure proposed. In St. Louis what the President advocated, however, glossed over by his euphemisms was complete compromise with the irreconcilable bloc of the Senate.

St. Louis sentiment—its vocal sentiment—appears to be very largely, either strongly for the world court or strongly against the world court because it was set up by the League of Nations. Consequently, as it seems to me, the middle-of-the-road position of the President did not appear.

At any rate, whatever the cause, it certainly didn't arouse any enthusiasm in the Coliseum crowd. It had been "press-agented" abroad that he would answer Borah in the place where Borah had let out his big blast against the court proposal. Doubtless many of those who heard the President at St. Louis went to the hall with this expectation. To them it must have seemed that the President, instead of answering Borah, was trying to placate him.

Next came the Kansas City speech, in which the President championed a plan—the railroad consolidation plan—to which the community is rampantly opposed, and then the speech preaching the gospel of contentment to farmers who profess to be losing money on every bushel of wheat they raise.

Gov. Davis summed up the Kansas feeling when he said, after the speech, that he had found the Hardings charming and gracious people, whom it had been delightful to meet, but that the President could hardly expect to win farmers to be contented when there was nothing in the present farm situation to be contented with.

It is unfortunate for Mr. Harding, politically speaking, that he doesn't throw away his manuscripts and make to his big audiences the same kind of intimate, heart-to-heart, main street talks that he makes from the rear platform of his train.

His manner in these little speeches is most appealing. He talks pleasant platitudes. That is a true statement, but alone, may leave a wrong inference. It needs to be said also that a man making several speeches a day must deal in platitudes, and

America of ours all that the fathers sought, if we are going to make it true to the institutions for which they built, we must continue to maintain religious liberty quite as well as civil and human liberty. As you remember, we build upon the foundation of civil liberty, and we cannot with the spirit of human liberty, and the third fundamental was religious liberty. The United States never can afford to deny religious freedom in this republic of ours.

Urges More Religious Devotion.

"One more thought; I should like to have America a little more earnest and thoroughly committed in its religious devotion. We were more religious a hundred years ago, or even fifty years ago, than we are today. We have been getting too far away from the spiritual and too much absorbed in our material existence. It tends to make us a sordid people. The World War lifted us out of the rut. We found ourselves consecrated to the defense of the Republic and fighting for our ideal of civilization, and we in America were put on a higher plane."

"But when the war was ended we started to drift back, thinking only of our selfish purposes. I tell you, my countrymen, if we can never be the ideal republic unless we have great ideals to pursue and know something of the spiritual as well as of the material life."

"That is one of the reasons I have been so zealous in the last few weeks in trying to have our country committed to something more of international helpfulness, so that it may be ready to play its part in the uplift of the world and the movement to prevent in the future conflicts among the nations. I think that is an ideal worth pursuing. So long as we have something to give and to inspire us to go on, I know we are going to be a better people than we were when we occupy ourselves merely in dig-

COMMITTEE URGING AMNESTY CALLS ON HARDING IN DENVER

President Reviews Arguments for Release of Men, Saying Question Gives Him Concern.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., June 25.—A delegation of highly placed citizens of Colorado headed by Gov. Sweet called on President Harding at his rooms in the Brown Hotel Monday afternoon and urged him to free the remaining "political" prisoners of the United States.

The President told them in the course of a 45-minute conference that the subject was giving him deep concern. His declaration, however, that he did not regard the Sacramento group of convicted I. W. W. as "political" prisoners, and that the delegation was not to be taken into consideration in his action in their behalf. The President was quoted by members of the party as having said that all of the men to whom he recently refused clemency were convicted of "overt acts," including the use of dynamite and the torch.

He did not, it was said, declare himself against clemency against clemency and even at one stage of the interview, after a member of the party appeared to be veering away from the amnesty cause, but himself declared that he was in favor of the release of the prisoners and set forth the arguments on that side clearly and fairly.

Gov. Sweet told the President that the delegation spoke not only their own view but that of a large and increasing number of people who believed that since the war was over the state "should be wiped clean" of the traitors who had been in the front of the Fourteenth street address. He was taken to city hospital. Police arrested several suspects.

Doyle Kelly of 2125 North Fourteenth street, a brother-in-law of the police Harris had run into the street and had picked up his daughter, Helen, as the children scattered before the truck. As he was straightening up, one of the men on the truck leaned over and hit Harris with the handle, knocking him down. The truck disappeared.

Knows of Pepper's View.

The President was told that Senator Pepper, after a review of the evidence, had declared for the release of the prisoners and the President said he was to be fair, according to Gov. Sweet, was manifest in the President's attitude as the views of both sides were developed. From other sources it was learned that the President was leaning toward the amnesty, naming especially the American Legion.

"You may put me down," said Gov. Sweet to the writer, "as being in full sympathy with the amnesty movement. The Post-Dispatch is doing a fine service in promoting it."

In the delegation, besides the Governor, were Judge B. L. Lind, Rabbi William S. Friedman, the Rev. A. H. C. Morse, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Denver; the Right Rev. J. Henry Thien, Catholic Bishop of Denver; the Rev. Charles L. Mead, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church; George F. Dunkle, District Court Judge, and Miss Elizabeth Spalding, president of the Artists Club. The Rev. Mr. Morse is pastor of the church where the President attended services yesterday.

Petition Presented to President.

The petition signed by all the foregoing and also by the Right Rev. Irving P. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of Colorado; Chief Justice James H. Teller of the Colorado Supreme Court; and Miss Lillian L. Lillard of Colorado Springs was presented to the President. It said that the continued confinement of the political prisoners was "arousing unnecessary discontent and distrust among the people" and that the President was urged to release "those who are in the interest of peace and human liberty."

Efforts are being made through the Joint Amnesty Committee of Washington to have the President call on the President at Cheyenne, Wyo.

digging, digging for the dollar. There is something else in life than that, my countrymen, to think about. Do not let the material desirability of material good fortune. You must be able to subsist before you can begin to aspire. I should like to have material good fortune be the portion of every man and woman in America, but I do not choose material good fortune alone.

World Torn With Hate.

"One of the troubles with the world today is that it is torn with suspicion and hate. Europe is in a condition of feverish restlessness and engendered by old-time passions, and we in America were put on a higher plane."

The President and Mrs. Harding gave for the salvation of men, and exerted ourselves to spread brotherhood and new trust and new confidence among the peoples, so that they may live in that fraternity which tends to solidify and cement together mankind."

If we could bring the Golden Rule into every phase of American life, we would be the happiest people in the world."

CONVICTS ALLOWED TO TALK DURING MEALS

Experiment at Missouri Penitentiary With View of Abolishing Rule of 87 Years' Standing.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 25.—Eighty-seven years of silence in the dining halls of the Missouri penitentiary here have been broken, the State Board of Penal Commissioners having permitted the 2100 convicts to talk at their meals Saturday and yesterday for the first time in history of the institution, which was founded in 1836.

Talking at meal time is being tried as an experiment only. If trouble results during the two weeks of the test, it then will become part of the permanent routine. The convicts eat in dining halls, the 70 women in one. In their own secluded part of the prison and the 2000 and more men in two large halls, one above the other in the same building, about 1200 in the upper and the others in the lower hall.

Talking at meal time has been forbidden throughout history of the institution, for the reason that it is considered the most dangerous time, the convicts being so far superior in number to the handful of guards which patrol the place, that a riot or outbreak, started at meal time when all of the inmates could participate effectively, might have serious consequences. The only hours for unrestricted conversation previously have been those spent upon the playground two or three times a week.

The two days during which the experiment has been tried, have indicated success for it, as it has brought only a quiet murmur of talk so far. The convicts have been warned that abuses of the privilege would result in its prompt revocation.

Priest in Auto Accident.

A report that Father William Roach, pastor of the Catholic Church at St. Mary's, Mo., had been seriously injured in an automobile accident, caused Father Thomas D. Kennedy, 1036 Thelma avenue, senior chaplain of the Thirty-fifth Division in the World War, to abandon a veterans' memorial service at which he was to officiate yesterday afternoon, and hurriedly drive the 60 miles to St. Mary's. On his arrival, he learned that Father Roach had suffered a slight shock, when an automobile in which he was riding skidded into a ditch.

LIQUOR SHIP CAPTAIN LOCKS SELF IN CABIN IN FEAR OF CREW

Provisions Give Out When It Takes Halifax Craft Three Months to Land Cargo in U. S.

By the Associated Press.
HALIFAX, June 25.—Returning from a vigil of three months off the Jersey coast, where she claims to have landed 4000 cases of liquor, the freighter Strandhill has been boarded by a squad of police to protect her master, Capt. H. K. Wilson, from the crew. No pay and short rations raised the ire of the crew. Capt. Wilson said that when the venture was undertaken it was believed a month would see them back in port and provisions and wages for a longer cruise were not taken.

When the men demanded their pay Capt. Wilson said that the financial transactions for the liquor had been made, that he had money but that they would be paid on their arrival here.

While making port the crew refused to work and became so threatening that Capt. Wilson locked himself in his cabin.

2 MEN DEAD AS RESULT OF FEUD OVER HOGS

In Fight of Neighbors at Holden, Mo., One Is Hit on Head, the Other Shot.

By the Associated Press.

HOLDEN, Mo., June 25.—George McCormick, 45 years old, and Benjamin Knight, 63, are dead as a result of an attack on McCormick at his home here late Saturday. The attack was the result, McCormick's friends say, of McCormick having shot a hog recently, the property of Knight. Knight is alleged to have been in the attacking party. He reported to have been shot to death by McCormick's son, Lowell McCormick.

George McCormick was angered by the destruction of his vegetable garden by Knight's hogs. He complained to Knight and then shot one of the hogs, neighbors say.

Late Saturday five men drove up to McCormick's home. In the party were Benjamin Knight, his two sons, Harry and Guy, and two men believed to have come from Kansas City. McCormick, who was a tall, muscular man, is reported to have held his own, until all five bore him to the ground and one of the assailants struck him on the head with a revolver, fracturing his skull. He died that night.

McCormick's son went into the house as the party was preparing to depart and obtained a shotgun. Lowell McCormick had only one shell, but he fired and Benjamin Knight was struck in the abdomen. He died yesterday. Guy Knight remained with his wounded father, which had been a house of worship for 77 years. During the last days of the Civil War, while Gen. Forrest and Wilson of the Confederate and Federal armies, respectively, were operating with their commands in Central Alabama, the old church was used by the women of Plantersville as an emergency hospital for both armies.

23 WHISKY PRESCRIPTIONS CAUSE DRUGGISTS' ARREST

Both Adolph G. Enderle and Frederick M. Barking Released on $1000 Bonds.

Arrest Saturday of Adolph G. Enderle of 5535 Waterman avenue, proprietor of a number of drug stores, and Frederick M. The names of five St. Louis physicians were used and their prescription stubs and records are being investigated.

NOTES IN PROGRESS IN AGRICULTURE

U. S. Marketing Specialist Reports on Conditions in Europe.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 25.—More progress has been made in Europe by agriculture than by industry toward restoration of normal conditions, and in consequence most of the countries which were at war are increasing their food production, according to Charles J. Brand, marketing specialist of the Department of Agriculture, who has just returned from a visit to the principal European countries.

Although Brand did not visit Russia, he said everyone he met who had recently been there reported conditions better than people outside commonly believe. France, according to the usual trade indices, is the most prosperous country in Europe today. Brand said, adding that great progress had been made in re-adapting land to cultivation in the devastated areas.

COLDEST JUNE IN YEARS EXPERIENCED IN BRITAIN

Frost and Lack of Sunshine Cause Farmers to Despair—Winter Clothing Needed.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, June 25.—Englishmen have given up hope of having any summer this year. Mid-June finds the whole of England experiencing intermittent frost, rainstorms, biting winds and disagreeable fogs. The almost complete absence of sunshine, has blighted many crops and farmers are in despair.

The month is described as the coldest June within memory. Merchants, dressmakers and milliners who laid in large stocks of light summer goods are facing bankruptcy, while the straw hat and soda fountain business has collapsed.

At the Ascot races this week, the fashionable women's gowns were hidden under steamer rugs and furs, while the men wore ulsters and mufflers.

Hotel keepers who had only sufficient coal for the winter season are finding it difficult to keep their guests warm, and have resorted to electric heaters because of the fuel shortage. American tourists expecting to find the salubrity of Palm Beach on this side of the water are warned by travel bureaus to bring winter raincoat.

Public Drinking Cups a Menace

The U. S. Public Health Service and 41 states prohibit their use because they transmit the disease germs often found in the mouths of both sick and healthy people ready to attack the user of a common drinking utensil. They are largely responsible for the spread of influenza, diphtheria, fevers, pneumonia and other diseases.

'INSURGENTS' PICK NEW
10TH WARD PRESIDENT

Stoehr Refuses to Turn Over
Books of Improvement Association to John J. Heil.

The Tenth Ward Improvement and Taxpayers' Association, for years a fervent participant in matters affecting the Free Bridge, has fallen into a factional row over the proposed northeastern railroad approach to the bridge, and has become a divided house.

Advocates of constructing the approach, regardless of whether the cost exceeds the $1,500,000 bond issue voted for it, recently ousted Arthur Stoehr as president because he disagreed with that view. Yesterday they elected John J. Heil, a Deputy Internal Revenue Collector, as president, in a meeting at Held Hall, Broadway and Chippewa street.

Stoehr holds books. The "insurgent" administration is not recognized by followers of Stoehr, who contend that he still is president because the ouster of Stoehr and election of Heil were not conducted according to the by-laws. Stoehr is holding the books and records and asserts he will not turn them over. Stoehr and Frank Gerhart, the real leader of the "build-at-any-cost" faction of the association, both are members of the Citizens' Supervisory Committee, which will direct expenditure of the $7,000,000 bond issue voted last February for public improvement. Stoehr has refused to support the northeast approach in the committee, if it will cost more than $1,500,000, and this stand was the cause of his ouster. The cost has been estimated at $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, exclusive of the site.

The Supervisory Committee on several occasions has declined to approve proposal to set aside $250,000 from this year's bond issue budget to pay for the site of the approach, when condemned. Partly through activities of Gerhart a bill directing condemnation of the site was sent by the Board of Public Service to the Board of Aldermen, without first being referred to the Supervisory Committee, and was passed by the aldermanic body.

Bill Before Mayor. The bill, which carries no appropriation, is before the Mayor for signature and he has been urged from several quarters to veto the bill. One of the reasons that the Supervisory Committee expressed disapproval because it had been ignored in a matter which will involve spending bond issue money. Stoehr and Gerhart, another Tenth Ward association member, visited the Mayor last week and urged that he veto the bill.

Stoehr today said he had been ousted as president by a faction dominated by Gerhart, and asserted the action did not represent the view of the association. "For several months Gerhart has taken up all the time at meetings talking about the bridge," Stoehr said, "and as a result the attendance has dropped to a mere handful. The sooner we get rid of Gerhart the better for the association."

He recalled the membership was about 700, but the ouster vote was 19 to 8. Heil was elected yesterday by 18 votes.

Followers of Stoehr said a meeting of the association would be called later, with Stoehr presiding, to effect a reorganization, and that the action of the Gerhart faction in electing Heil would be ignored.

"EAT MEAT FOR HEALTH" WEEK

31 Railroads Featuring Meat on Their Bills of Fare.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 25.—A surplus of 5,000,000 hogs and a large surplus of beef on farms throughout the country has prompted the Government, the railroads and the live-stock and meat board to co-operate in starting an "eat meat for health" week.

R. C. Pollock, managing director of the Meat Board, in announcing the campaign, declared that 31 railroads, constituting most of the mileage of the country, would establish a precedent in displaying Government posters in their dining cars. Meat will be featured on the bills of fare this week, he said, served with approximately 2,000,000 meals during the week.

YOUTH SLASHED BY BURGLAR

Edward Nelks Had Captured Man When He Drew Knife.

Edward Nelks, 16 years old, of 4603 Carter avenue, is suffering from a knife wound in the left thigh, inflicted late Saturday night, when he was stabbed by a burglar whom he and companions had chased to King's highway and Arnold place, after the man had leaped from a window at the home of Floyd Maize, 4408 Richmond place, near by. Nelks released the burglar after being cut, and the man escaped.

The boys' attention had been attracted by the screams of Evelyn Maize, 11 years old, who heard the burglar in the house during the absence of her parents from home. Two purses, containing $27, were missed after the intruder's escape.

Cross-Continent Flight Plans.

By the Associated Press.

Now for the First Time LINIT

the Remarkable Starch Discovery is Offered to the Housewife!

HAVEN'T you often said to yourself: "How I wish the dainty things I am so proud of would always stay as fresh and beautiful as when they first came from the store?"

For, as every woman knows, once washed, these garments seem to lose something of the beautiful finish they had when first brought home.

This applies not only to your personal garments, but to your children's wash clothes, your table cloths and napkins, your sheets, pillow cases and bedspreads, and to all your summer dresses, aprons and waists.

Secret of the Natural Linen Finish

THE secret of the lovely linen finish you find even in new cotton goods is now easily explained. It's all in the starch the great manufacturers use. Such a starch is Linit—the new scientific starch discovery.

Linit makes even your most inexpensive cotton garments and fabrics look and feel like linen—with a soft, cool, pliable finish usually found only in pure linen itself. Linit gives your fine fabrics, shirt-waists, children's wash clothes, men's shirts and soft collars, that natural, rich linen finish you admire so much in goods just from the store.

Makes Cotton
Look and Feel Like Linen

LINIT makes your children's cotton garments and fabrics look just like linen, and free from all that disagreeable lint usually found with cotton goods.

Preserves the Life of the Fabric and Resists Wear

BECAUSE Linit is made by an improved process, it remains free-running like water. This enables Linit to penetrate every thread of the fabric, helping to preserve the material and increase its length of life.

This penetrating power in Linit also saves you much time and annoyance, as it absolutely prevents caking, smearing, or sticking to the iron.

And not only will all your cotton fabrics and garments have a cool and refreshing linen finish, but you will also notice the entire absence of disagreeable lint. It is because of this lint that fabrics soil so quickly.

For your fine and dainty garments, you can also use Linit instantly in cold water. See directions on the package.

The very next time you starch, use Linit with your handkerchiefs, curtains, table cloths, children's dresses, bloomers, slips or petticoats, cotton underwear, infant's lawn or organdie caps, sheets, pillow cases, bed spreads, men's soft collars, ladies' collars and cuffs, summer dresses, aprons or waists, dusting caps or scarfs.

Notice the Economy of Starching With Linit

Freck Dissolve Them W

Amazing New Discovery Goes Strai
the Little Pigment Spots and Dis
Them—Almost Over Night. Also G
Blemishes and Beautifies the Skin.

NO longer need you despair as you look at those disfiguring little brown spots. No longer need you be shame to hats and parasols, or fear to get into a bathing suit.
For the new Domestine Freckle Cream is GUARANTEED to banish every freckle. Unlike many other creams and lotions, which merely cover up disgusting spots, the new cream removes them in a gentle, natural way.

You simply apply it at night before bedtime, like any ordinary cold cream.
No bother and no mess, but the action is almost magical. Even on the first application the lighter spots disappear, and within a few days every mark and blemish vanishes. Not only does it leave the skin spotless and milk-white, but softer and more beautiful than ever before.

How It Works
Science tells us that freckles are simply small masses made by the action of sunlight and other certain sensitive skin cells, called pigment cells. Persons with very fair skin have very few of these cells, so that the brown color is more intense in a given area.

PLAN FOR POLICING AIR UP TO POLICE BOARD

Searchlight Flash System and Reinstallation of Traffic Whistles Also Suggested.

Bringing many ideas for improvement of the St. Louis Police Department, President Brockman of the Police Board, Chief of Police O'Brien and Chief of Detectives Hoagland returned last night from the International Convention of Police Chiefs at Buffalo and from a visit to other cities where they studied traffic and other police problems.

Among other things that will be laid before the Police Board for discussion will be the advisability of training a man for the air service so that an officer skilled in aeronautics will be available in the event that criminals take to the air; a searchlight flash system at night and the sounding of sirens during the day to notify policemen to telephone headquarters in emergencies; reinstallation of the whistle system for traffic signals, together with a semaphore system at congested intersections, and other measures for the protection of school children.

The department heads were impressed with the New York Police Department air service and believe the time is near when a robber now and then may resort to the airplane either in committing a crime or making escape. The traffic whistle, Chief O'Brien said, expedites movement of traffic and its usefulness overcomes objection to the noise, which was the reason for its discontinuance here.

A searchlight, giving off flashes across the sky at night, he said, would be an effective and quick method of notifying policemen on their beats to communicate with their stations in an emergency. He pointed out that all policemen in the city could thus be aroused to action by this method within a few minutes.

In New York all factory whistles are sounded at 3 p. m. on school days to warn motorists that children are on their way home from school. This system may be recommended by the local Police Board as an extra precaution for the safety.

Chief O'Brien expressed the opinion that the time is near when the Bertillon system of measurement of criminals for identification purposes will be abandoned and that the police will depend altogether on photographs and the finger print system.

BOY WITH CIGAR LIGHTER CAUSES BLAZE AND PANIC

Spark From Device Falls Into Display of Fireworks—Crowd in Store Stampedes.

By the Associated Press.
MOLINE, Ill., June 25.—Damage estimated at $40,000 resulted from a spectacular blaze in Moline's downtown district Saturday night, while the streets and shops were jammed with shoppers. Scores of lives were imperiled in the resultant stampede.

A lad with a patent cigar lighter, which he manipulated while inspecting the fireworks display in the Fisk & Lossley department store, was responsible for the blaze. A spark flew from the lighter into the fireworks and the store became a scene of panic. Crowds stampeded toward exits as the fireworks spat flame in all directions.

Seven women and children were rescued from window ledges and awnings. Two women were slightly injured. A fire truck sideswiped three automobiles two blocks from the blaze in averting a crash with a street car discharging passengers. The truck was disabled and two bystanders were slightly hurt.

MISSING BOY, 10, THOUGHT TO HAVE BEEN DROWNED

Believing his son was drowned in the Mississippi River near the east end of the Municipal Bridge, Friday, Charles Green of 933 Hickory street, today went to Prairie du Rocher, Ill., below East St. Louis, to view the body of a youth taken from the river to ascertain if it is that of his son.

Green's son, Hettie, 10 years old, has been missing since Friday, when he went swimming with other boys, who have reported that Hettie got beyond his depth and was drowned. The boy's clothing was found near the east approach to the Municipal Bridge, where the other boys, who had become frightened, had hidden it.

The body of John Day, 20 years old, of 1957 Utah street, who was drowned Saturday in Smith's Bay, an outlet of the Mississippi, directly across the river from Potomac street, was recovered in the bay at 3:30 a. m. today by two fishermen who had been searching for the body since 10 o'clock last night. Day, who was a clerk at the Jefferson-Gravois Bank, was drowned while swimming with three companions, one of whom made a vigorous effort to save him.

GEORGIANS INDOORSE FORD

By the Associated Press.
SAVANNAH, Ga., June 25.—A petition signed by citizens of Savannah indorsing Henry Ford for the presidency, having been forwarded to Detroit, the general secretary to Ford has replied in a letter acknowledging receipt of the petition.

"In view of the interest displayed Ford can have no objection to their further activities in this direction."

AVIATION WEEK IN RUSSIA

Regular Communication Already Established Between Various Cities. By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, June 25.—After many months of preparation during which considerable amounts were subscribed towards the construction of airplanes, Russia yesterday formally launched "Aviation Week" for the purpose of arousing nation-wide interest in the building of the war and peace air fleet. The commercial aerial lines of Russia have been advanced greatly in the last two months, and already there is regular aerial communication between Moscow and Tiflis, Moscow and Tcheran, Moscow and Koenigsburg and other places.

For the most part German planes are in use and German war aces, who have no field of endeavor in Germany, have come to Russia as commercial fliers.

LABOR BOARD AGAIN IGNORED

Another Part of Pennsylvania System Holds Employee Election. By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Ignoring the recent rebuke of the United States Railroad Labor Board directed against the Pennsylvania Railroad because of the line's defiance of one of the board's decisions, the Northwestern region of the road yesterday completed election of employee representatives of the shopmen and miscellaneous forces under the road's employee representation plan.

It was over the manner of electing shop craft representatives that the Pennsylvania and the board clashed. Although the appeal of the Pennsylvania to the United States Supreme Court resulted in the court upholding the board's right to rebuke the road, the board had no power to enforce its ruling and the railroad has ignored the decision.

KLAN PRAISED BY TWO PASTORS IN SERMONS

The Rev. Mr. McGehee and the Rev. Mr. Crawford Exchange Pulpits—Latter Replies to Hawes.

The Rev. Charles D. McGehee, pastor of the Havens Street Methodist Church, and the Rev. C. C. Crawford of the Fourth Christian Church, both members of the Ku Klux Klan, exchanged pulpits last night and delivered sermons extolling the Klan. Reference by the Rev. Mr. McGehee to the order was by inference only, as he did not mention its name, confining himself to allegorical remarks concerning an "invisible empire of righteousness warring against an invisible empire of evil." Recently, after he had announced his intention of delivering a Klan sermon in his own church, the Rev. Mr. McGehee was instructed by Bishop McMurry to change his topic, because it was not desirable to have the Klan "theme of a sermon within the walls of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

The Havens Street M. E. Church was the scene of a Ku Klux Klan sermon last night, however, for the Rev. Mr. Crawford defended the Klan against Congressman Hawes' recent attack upon it, denounced what he termed the "political activities of the Catholic Church," and predicted a bloody civil and religious war in this country, "unless conditions change."

The Rev. Mr. McGehee made what was interpreted as a reference to the Klan against Klan sermons in his own church, when he declared last night that there were "no super-cooled sermons in the Fourth Christian Church, and there'll be none at the Havens Street Church, at least not as long as I'm there. But I may not be there long."

MUTE AND BROTHER-IN-LAW HELD ON BIGAMY CHARGE

Roman Said to Have Begun When He Interpreted Sign Language for Her.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Mrs. Margaret Granskopf Fitzgerald, 25 years old, a deaf mute, and Edmund Fitzgerald, 25, of 424 West Fifty-fourth street, alleged to be her husband and the father of her child as well as her brother-in-law, are being held on $1000 bond pending the hearing of bigamy charges against them.

They were arraigned yesterday after they had been brought back to New York by a Sheriff from Cardozo, N. Y., whither they fled on June 9. They were traced at the request of Mrs. Madeline Granskopf Fitzgerald, wife No. 1 of Edmund and sister of Margaret.

According to the police, Fitzgerald married Madeline on June 15, 1918. Margaret, the sister, made her home with them and attended an institution to learn the sign language. A romance developed when Fitzgerald learned to talk on his fingers in order to act as interpreter for her.

On Feb. 7, this year, the police say, Fitzgerald admits having been married to Margaret.

COUGHS UP BULLET AS EVIDENCE

It Will Be Used in Trial for Murder Beginning Tomorrow.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Daniel Healey, druggist, of Yonkers, wounded three months ago by a man who killed two of Healey's companions, coughed up a bullet yesterday in time to have it offered in evidence at the murder trial, which will start in White Plains tomorrow.

Healey is to be the only eyewitness of the double murder the States alleges Peter McLean, 28 years old, committed in Healey's drug store in Yonkers. McLean, who had been employed in the store as porter, is alleged to have wounded Healey and killed Mrs. Mary Mallon and George Walsh. Healey hovered between life and death with a bullet in his neck for a week. This is the bullet that came out of his mouth in a coughing spell.

Saar Made No-Man's-Land, Where Lese Majeste Decree Declared Even Complaint Was Criminal

French Regard Basin as Thiers Chiefly for Political Reasons—People of Territory Found to Be Overwhelmingly German in Sympathies.

The Post-Dispatch begins a series of articles written by a special correspondent of the Manchester Guardian and the New York World and the Post-Dispatch on conditions in the Saar Valley. In connection with the first there is a special article by William Bolitho on the lese majeste decree which made it a crime to criticize the French Administration, the League of Nations or the Versailles Treaty.

Reared by the French to the lese majeste doctrine recently drew attention to remarkable conditions in the Saar coal basin, which the French are endeavoring to sear from Germany. The Saar territory has become the No-Man's-Land of Europe.

The basin, of only 760 square miles, which adjoins Lorraine and supplies coal for the Lorraine iron industry, was put by the Versailles Treaty under control of a League of Nations Commission. A plebiscite at the end of fifteen years, to determine the future allegiance of the Saar, was part of this arrangement.

The following article deals with the political circumstances leading up to the present administration of the Valley as set forth in the Versailles Treaty, and shows that the people of the territory are overwhelmingly German in sympathies.

Special Correspondence of the Manchester Guardian, The New York World and The Post-Dispatch.
ESSEN, June 9.—To understand what is happening today in the Saar territory, it is necessary to look back perhaps as some have done, to the eighth and ninth centuries, but to a year which in its spirit and atmosphere was scarcely less removed from the present—namely, 1919, when in the flush of victory the Allies assembled in Paris to dictate peace to a defeated and, in the eyes of half the world, diabolical Germany. Conscious of the advantage accruing to them from this atmosphere, the French delegation at the conference transmitted a weighty memorial to the Allies on the subject of the Saar territory, which, agreed with the following words: "The territory in question has been for centuries to France, and was only torn away from her by force."

The French Assumption.
This opening sentence is the essential part of the long and cumbersome document. Throughout the argument it is implicitly or explicitly assumed that France has a moral right to the Saar territory, and that a large number of the inhabitants of the territory—the specific number of 100,000 is mentioned—desire before all things, incorporation in the French State.

The economic arguments with which this political argument is backed are merely subordinate. France proposes to seize the Saar, so desirable as accessory to the Lorraine ironfields, in the name, not of economic necessity, but of political right. The essential point is the moral right to the territory, and it is this that the French boundary of 1914 should be restored and the 100,000 Saarlanders made subjects of the French Republic.

Political Reasons Prevail.
It is an idea which French Government circles have never even pretended to abandon; if they have consented to accept for the moment a "best solution," it is in the confident hope of being able sooner or later to return to their original primary demands.

On March 28, 1919, the subject came up for discussion by the Big Three. President Wilson expressed his deep regret that he was unable to adopt the French point of view, but stated his conviction that the Saar territory never had been mentioned among French war aims, and therefore, was on quite a different footing from Alsace-Lorraine. At the same time he was prepared to allow France the use of the valuable Saar mines as compensation for the damage done to French mines in the northern departments. He did not see the necessity of, yet did not oppose finally, the assumption of the Saar mines by France. Lloyd George spoke in a similar though less resolute manner.

Clemenceau Reply Typical.
The answer of M. Clemenceau was typical of French political pleading. He did not deny any of President Wilson's assertions and reproached him with looking at the whole question from a cold, abstract viewpoint. He asserted passionately that France needed moral as well as material reparations.

Finally, he pleaded that "at least 100,000 Frenchmen in the Saar should not be condemned to suffer the Prussian yoke. He further recalled France's help to America in the War of Independence and promised that sentiment as well as principles should be considered in the decision.

From the welter of notes and meetings which made up this discussion gradually emerged a new element, thus finally adopted in the Peace Treaty. France was to be granted absolute ownership of the valuable mines of the Saar, while the sovereignty of the territory was transferred from Berlin to a League of Nations for 14 years. At the end of this period a plebiscite was to settle the final fate of the dismembered province. As France's Saar claims all along has been supported by elaborate historical arguments, it is perhaps useful to recall the circumstances under which France acquired and was later deprived of the territory in question.

Louis XIV Seized Saar.
In 1680 Louis XIV cast his eyes upon the Saar Province and sent a military expedition to seize it. This expedition was repulsed by Imperial troops. He then had recourse to one of those dynastic arguments dear to the diplomats of the seventeenth century. He compelled Blonora, Countess of Nassau-Saarbrücken, to recognize her title as a fief of the Bishopric of Metz, and indirectly of the French crown. On the strength of this the Saar territory was incorporated into the kingdom of France until 1807, when at the Peace of Ryswick, the great monarch was forced to disgorge it.

Among other ill-gotten gains, only himself built, he was allowed to retain; this fortress remained French throughout the eighteenth century. In 1792, French Revolutionary troops entered Saarbrücken, and the

PARADE ON LABOR DAY CALLED OFF BY CENTRAL TRADES

Delegates Vote 73 to 15 Against Display Which Has Been the Custom Since 1878.

Waning Interest One of Reasons Advanced

Day Will Be Observed This Year Only With Picnic at Triangle Park, 4100 South Broadway.

Central Trades and Labor Union, composed of delegates from all labor unions in St. Louis, yesterday rescinded its action of two weeks ago by voting not to have a Labor day parade this year, on the first Monday in September, as has been the custom since 1878.

Instead of the display of organized labor's strength with a parade, the day will be observed with a picnic at Triangle Park, 4100 South Broadway.

Those against the parade pointed out that interest in the parade as a demonstration of labor's strength had been waning among the workers and the sad orphans in their charge is as old as melodrama, yet it never fails to move the gallery to fast clenching and tears.

We have lately had re-edition of the theme in the scandal of the League of Nations and the Saar miners. If any guardian in private life had turned toward a child in his care as the League has treated the miners, he would answer to a Police Magistrate. The facts are undisputed.

Under the same treaty that founded the League, with its huge staff, its enviable secretary, its series of well paid and pleasant posts for statesmen past their prime and its noble and general mission of keeping the world at peace, a particular trust of safeguarding the liberties and rights of the Saar Valley people was given to it. The Saar was war booty; its inhabitants, as individuals, parts of the coal industry, were made hostages of the French. Hardly any population in Europe—not the Hungarians in Slovakia nor the betrayed mountaineers of Montenegro—had such solid reason to fear injustice in the future as this surrendered people.

The order of their lives, their institutions, their liberties, their allegiance, were to remain at the mercy of an army of occupation until the bazy day when the League and the comma of the treaty shall have been fulfilled. They went with the coal. Beyond this cloudy hope of release was the certainty of a plebiscite, a vote of the League and its populations have learned, for a double torture of terrorism and corruption by the rivals for their votes. Even the frozen imaginations of the Big Three grasped what the coming years would mean to the miners of the Saar. Therefore, they commended these people to the special charge of the League, to be governed and protected by a commission chosen by the Council of the League and under its supervision. We have seen how these gentlemen of the council and commission performed this duty. The Saar valley was at no time a pleasant place to live in. The villages were tied to fear, other by gritty roads for fear of being lost in the fog of the coke furnaces.

Protection—Of a Sort.
The former enchantments of woods and river have sunk into the gloomy air without a trace. Both sides of the lives of the inhabitants—their work and pleasures—are invisible. They live half their lives in underground chimneys whose soot they wear in their clothes and on their faces.

Shops, grog shops, cinemas and cemeteries are equally crusted with the same dirt. Their houses are tiny, cubed, faded red, scattered over the landscape like the building blocks of a child on the rubbish heap. Before the war, they lived like other Continental miners, with decent people do not care to read about.

The war brought them famine, peace, added persecution. These were the people and the district that the League of Nations Commission was trusted to protect. They have done it, first, by taking away the right to strike from them, a right which is as universal and unquestioned as the right to life. Then for a short time the commission took away the right, which even bandits allow their victims of complaining.

A military expedition to seize it. This expedition was repulsed by Imperial troops. He then had recourse to one of those dynastic arguments dear to the diplomats of the seventeenth century. He compelled Blonora, Countess of Nassau-Saarbrücken, to recognize her title as a fief of the Bishopric of Metz, and indirectly of the French crown. On the strength of this the Saar territory was incorporated into the kingdom of France until 1807, when at the Peace of Ryswick, the great monarch was forced to disgorge it.

Among other ill-gotten gains, only himself built, he was allowed to retain; this fortress remained French throughout the eighteenth century. In 1792, French Revolutionary troops entered Saarbrücken, and the whole Saar territory became once more formally French in 1815, when the Treaty of Lunéville left the bank of the Rhine was incorporated into the Republic. In 1814, the Congress of Vienna, with unexampled generosity, did not strictly renege on the promise to return the Saar territory to its original owners, but the Saar territory was returned to their previous owners. The Saarland went, together with the rest of the Rhineland, to Prussia. French diplomats of the time, particularly "wrong" in this solution, which historical records show to have corresponded with the wishes of the great majority of the inhabitants.

The French further have continually added the argument that the Saar was largely French in speech and sympathy. M. Clemenceau's 150,000 Frenchmen resident in the Saar in 1918 are very elusive people to discover. The number of Frenchmen officially recorded as living in the Saar in 1913 was less than 100. At the present moment the number of French residents is double the count of the above figure named.

If by "Frenchmen" is meant sympathizers with the French cause, the argument is scarcely stronger. In spite of every possible attempt, no argument given to secessionist and anti-German movements from 1913 on.

THREE MORE PROFESSORS AT AMHERST RESIGN AS PROTEST

Prof. Hamilton, Who Also Quit Because Meiklejohn Was Ousted, Will Teach in Washington U. School at National Capital.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
AMHERST, Mass., June 25.—The protest by part of the faculty of Amherst College over the ousting of President Alexander Meiklejohn was accentuated yesterday when three more members of the faculty announced their resignations. Three already had resigned. It is expected that others of the "militant minority," who side with Dr. Meiklejohn also will walk out.

Those who resigned yesterday were Albert Parker Fitch, professor of the history of religion and Biblical literature; Walter W. Stewart, professor of economics, and Howard E. Hinson, organist, choirmaster and instructor in music. Those who previously had resigned were Walton H. Hamilton, Olds professor of economics; John M. Gaus, associate professor of political science; and Walter Agard, associate professor of Greek.

Prof. Hamilton declared that during his eight years at Amherst the classroom had been "a place of free and joyous inquiry."

Prof. Hamilton Second Member of New School Faculty.
Chancellor Hall of Washington University has announced the second appointment to the faculty of the new graduate school in economics and government, which is designed to fit young men for public service. It is that of Walter Hale Hamilton, now Olds professor in Amherst College, to be professor of economics.

Prof. Hamilton has been professor of Economics in Chicago and Michigan universities and is an associate editor of the Journal of Political Economy. He also is author of several books on economics and was a member during war years of the War Labor Policies Board. He will assume his new duties in the autumn.

The first of the fellowships in the new school, the gift of President Robert S. Brookings of the University corporation, also have been awarded. A third year fellowship carrying an annuity of $1000 toward expenses in Washington where the University will maintain a residence foundation in a home donated also by Brookings, has been awarded to John A. Tillems of the University of Illinois. Second year fellowships carrying an annuity of $600 have been awarded to William H. Young of Austin, Tex.; Maurice D. Osten of Marshallfield, Mo.; Lawrence Myers of Ames, Ia.; and Karl Van Meter of Cape Girardeau.

Dr. Fitch in his letter to George A. Plimpton, president of the board of trustees, said "I am unable to accept either the decision of the board as to his removal or the manner in which it was accomplished."

Prof. Stewart, in his letter commenting on the attitude of the trustees, said: "I am convinced that by that action they have made it impossible to realize at Amherst the ideal of a liberal college."

Hinners wrote Plimpton that he could not "honorably acquiesce" in the decision which removed President Meiklejohn from the office of the kind of influence which was exerted to bring the board to that decision.

LEVIATHAN HOME FROM 'TRIAL TRIP' WITH SPEED MARK

Majority of Laaker's Personally Chosen Guests on Cruise Held Their Identity to the End.

ARRIVAL DELAYED BY DENSE FOG

"When We Get in Cold Water, We'll Make a Better Record," Ship's Commander Says.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Leviathan came back yesterday from her "trial trip" with the world's speed record which she had hung up in the swiftly flowing current of the Gulf Stream. Harbor craft from the Narrows to her berth at Pier 44 in North River tied down their sirens in welcome to her and aboard the great craft the personally selected guests of Albert D. Laaker, retiring chairman of the United States Shipping Board, echoed their acclaim as the junket at public expense came to an end.

To the end a majority of the personally chosen held their identity behind the simply initialed names that went on the purser's list. Their homes, their occupations were not made known and those who did become fully known had their prominence to thank or their own gossip as they idled about the decks and salons.

427 Persons Aboard.
The corrected lists showed a total of 427 aboard, of whom more than 100 were there for official reasons. Laaker's guests numbered about half of the 600 for whom provision had been made when he planned the junket.

The guests were agreed that the record the Leviathan had made was a sufficient answer to the nation's wide protest against such a "trial trip" at public expense. They talked about little else, at any rate, and questions whether the record might not have been made by a commercial ship in the presence of a company of paying passengers were waved aside as impertinent.

The Leviathan's progress of the day was interrupted by a "trial trip" at public expense. They talked about little else, at any rate, and questions whether the record might not have been made by a commercial ship in the presence of a company of paying passengers were waved aside as impertinent.

The Leviathan covered 2209 miles after leaving the Boston light ship, June 18. Capt. Hartley said the ship had exceeded every expectation. Experts who made the "trial trip" were of the opinion that she could maintain a greater speed than the 27.48 knots which she had made on her merchant marine speed record.

No ship of its size was ever handled so easily. When the Leviathan's engines stopped turning over, seven huge propellers, each 16 feet in diameter, three of the Moran Towing Co. put their bows against the side of the liner and began pushing and pulling. In less than an hour the big ship's nose was alongside her pier.

So far as the record-breaking run of 25 hours at an average speed of 27.48 knots was concerned, Capt. Hartley said that he chose the course from Jupiter light to Cape Henry because it was free from fog.

"Seventeen minutes after the record had been made we were in a fog," he said. "Our big turbines were hampered by the heat of the circulating sea water. It was 84 degrees. When we got in cold water, as the other fellows, we'll make a better record. Our engine force had to work in a temperature of 155 degrees."

Vessel Exceeds Hopes.
In every department the vessel had exceeded the most optimistic hopes. Everything about the Leviathan, save of course the ship itself, is American. The American eagle adorns everything on the line from the masthead to the china and silverware.

W. F. Gibbs, engineer, who conditioned the Leviathan, declared that the adverse conditions mentioned by the commander more than offset anything the ship might have had from the Gulf stream current. In hanging up the new mark for sustained speed, as to the possible advantage from the speed of the Gulf stream, Gibbs declared many British ships are made where the tide reaches six knots an hour. The Gulf stream ranges from 10 to three knots.

"They were the best-behaved crowd of men we've ever known," said the only two women who sailed

VIEWS OF TWO JUDGES OF THE MISSOURI SUPREME COURT ON FEDERAL WAR PRISONERS

Both R. F. Walker and John T. White Give Approval to Efforts to Obtain Release of All Political Convicts.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Sunday Sports Special.)
By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, June 25.—Two Missouri Supreme Court Judges—Judge John T. White and Judge R. F. Walker—have given approval to the effort for the release of Federal political prisoners.

Supreme Judge Walker, who prior to his election to the court in 1912 from St. Louis was Attorney-General of Missouri, said that many of the prisoners appeared to have been "improperly convicted and unjustly sentenced" and that the wrong could be righted only by executive clemency, "which we hope will be further extended upon the President's return from Alaska."

Supreme Judge White, serving his first term but who had been Supreme Court Commissioner for four years prior to his election from Springfield, said that "no good purpose could be served by continuing them longer in prison."

Judge Walker's Statement.
Supreme Judge Walker's statement in full follows: "A satisfactory answer to your inquiry cannot be made in the absence of a knowledge of the records of these convicted under the espionage act and who are not included in the President's recent exercise of clemency. The conviction of these prisoners was under a distinctive war measure at a time when the country was aflame with patriotism and pugnacious opinion ran high against anyone who was suspected of being a traitor. To say that juries and the courts were not more or less influenced by this perverted condition of the public mind would be to say that anyone having a knowledge of human nature knows not to be true. That there were, under such conditions, all-considered convictions and unjust sentences there can be no doubt."

Basin of Conclusion.
"I am led to this conclusion not from an examination of the records in these cases, but by the next best source of information, the opinion of eminent lawyers who have made such an examination. I refer more particularly to the review of these cases by Judge Alton B. Parker and U. S. Senator George W. Pepper. Their examinations have led them to earnestly recommend clemency. In many instances, they have in effect declared, convictions have been had and heavy sentences inflicted and not for the commission of overt acts, but simply for intemperate utterances. If this be true, and we believe implicitly in the correctness of these statements, the administration of the criminal law in the Federal courts during the World War, so far as concerns political prisoners, "was a race between the Government and the prisoner in which the former had a long lead in the lead and the latter was heavily weighted."

"Happily, however, the conditions which rendered possible such an administration of the criminal law in the Federal courts no longer exists. That many of these prisoners were improperly convicted and unjustly sentenced is evident. Their records, so far as the courts are concerned, are final and the avenues for judicial relief are closed. The wrongs done these prisoners, therefore, can only be righted by executive clemency, which we hope will be further extended upon the President's return from Alaska."

No Good Purpose Served.
Judge White's statement was: "I do not know anything about the facts in any of the individual cases—I have not read the paper sufficiently to acquaint myself with them. "My understanding is, that these prisoners are undergoing sentences for violation of war measures, that they have been found guilty of crimes which would not be crimes in times of peace. Except, perhaps, in cases of peculiar aggravation, no good purpose can be served in continuing them longer in prison. Their further punishment would not prevent others from committing like acts, but rather would encourage them. In fact, the further punishment of the prisoners would furnish argument for the very people who are disposed to hamper processes of government, the advocacy of radical doctrines."

Wireless Records Broken.
The Radio Corporation of America broke all records for quantity of wireless messages sent and from the radio operators. Lieutenant John R. Irwin, Elmo N. Pickett, Anthony Tambourino and Raymond J. Green, were about exhausted. Manager David Sarnoff, who began his radio career at the key, jumped in and helped in transmitting, easing the strain on his men.

The Leviathan leaves little to be desired as a steamship. Such defects as were found by the "trial" board will be corrected before the vessel sails on her voyage to Southampton, July 4.

There was much complaint from those who occupied inside cabins in the tropic waters it was next to impossible to sleep in, them and many spent the night sleeping on the deck chairs, garbed in pink and blue pajamas.

In the Leviathan steamed up the bag brand-new brooms were laid out to the peaks of the masts, significant of sweeping victory.

To the end Laaker refused to discuss the trip with reporters, but did make a short speech Friday night in which he said if those on board threw their business to the United States, particularly to the Leviathan, the deficiency of the Shipping Board would be reduced 50 per cent.

170 LAWS EFFECTIVE TODAY
New Prohibition Statute Among the Most Important of These.
By the Associated Press.
JEFFERSON CITY, June 25.—One hundred and seventy laws passed by the fifty-second General Assembly and approved by Governor Hyde, went into effect today.

Among those termed "most important" because they affect the State at large and make entirely new provisions, are: Missouri's new "dry law," or prohibition enforcement act; the law authorizing formation of non-profit, co-operative, marketing associations by farmers; the new "blue sky" or Missouri securities act, to limit the sale of fraudulent, or untruthful stock; the abolition of the State beverage and hotel inspection departments and their consolidation with the field and drug inspection department; stringent food laws to prevent the adulteration of milk, butter, ice cream and other dairy products; and the new blind pension law.

Those Who Would Plaster, Can.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

It is possible to infer from the editorial, "Wages and Salaries," printed in the Post-Dispatch, that plasterers in St. Louis are demanding a per diem wage, which, figured upon an annual basis may amount to $1310 in excess of the average annual wage of high school teachers; that the demand is unreasonable, and that the trade of plastering offers inducements not to be found in the profession of high school teacher. Ignoring the obvious possibility that the plasterers' wage may be based on hours actually worked, not on the week, month, or year, whereas the high school teachers' salary is usually based on the month or year, irrespective of hours worked, may I quote to those who carp at the wage demanded by the plasterer, this story:

A kindly man, on the line of the "underground railroad" over which slaves were carried from the south to the free north, said to a fugitive: "Sam, you had a home, food, clothing, a kindly master down south. Are you sure that in addition to the somewhat intangible thing you call 'freedom,' that you will have all these very necessary, tangible things in the place to which you are going, and if these things are not better, with captivity, than lack of them with freedom?"

"Boss," replied the negro, "if you want me to do the job down south, I'll do it. I was still open."

"Forgive Us Our Transgressions."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

READING in the "People's Column" in your issue of the 19th inst., the letter of H. S. Church, of Renault, Ill., relating to political prisoners. I wonder if Mr. Church is a Christian? If not, I would suggest that he read the Lord's prayer.

ROBERT L. RICHARD.

The Cause of War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I wish to thank you for the benevolent stand you have taken in regard to the "imprisoned thinkers," called political prisoners. It is gratifying that a great unbiased paper of prominence like the Post-Dispatch would seek their release. When the great mass of the people of the United States awake from their lethargic sleep they will wish for no more war. When they come to realize the underlying cause of war, as a cause of class played by capitalists, they will oppose it.

Right now in the Ruhr Valley French and German capitalists, coal and steel barons are playing politics and sowing seeds of discord, at the very time causing suffering, want and sorrow to innocent women and children. As a result of the infamous Versailles treaty the Bulgarian Government is toppling. Will justice never come, or shall despots rule?

EX-SERVICE MAN.

A Mountain Breeze.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The splendid articles and editorials demanding release of political prisoners is like a pungent mountain breeze through a jungle swamp. It is refreshing, indeed, to hear such a powerful voice raised in defense of those brave souls, voiceless and all but forgotten by those whose liberties they are fighting and dying for.

In its long life of good deeds, the Post-Dispatch has done nothing nobler than this, and nothing that will bring it more stalwart friends among the nations' toilers, and those who love liberty and justice everywhere.

J. O. FORD, Ala.

An Army Major on Free Speech.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have read your un-American editorials about political prisoners, and the letter from slackers and silly sentimentalists, but have seen none in defense of them from the ex-service men. I, as an ex-service man, have to say, and I think I voice the opinion of the majority, that these political prisoners should have been shot instead of sentenced to a penitentiary, and as for me, I would let them stay in prison until Arkansas goes Republican.

Free speech is all well and good in times of peace, but when they are obstructing the progress of the war, thereby endangering the lives of the men in the service, then they should have been shot the same as spies or traitors.

RAILROADS AND RIVERS.

President Harding, in his Kansas City speech, urged co-ordination of rail and water facilities, and he gave the railroad executives good advice when he urged them to assist in bringing about the co-ordination "not only as a means of popularized and efficient public service, but as a means of ending the peril of their own fortunes."

It sometimes seems as if the railroad executives do not realize the peril of their present status. The President's speech should help them realize it. Though opposed to Government ownership he recognizes its possibility. He believes it can be avoided. But its avoidance calls for a policy of enlightenment, constructiveness and recognition of facts which thus far not only has not been formulated by the executives but to which they are opposed.

The country has got to have more transportation, better transportation and cheaper transportation. That can only be had by utilizing all our transportation resources. It can never be achieved by consolidation or by the magic of administration. The rivers must be put to work and on fair terms. There is no other solution. Along with rail and river co-ordination must come the highways built so as to serve the economic requirements.

The thing to do now, however, is to develop the rivers, make them great transportation agencies and operate them jointly with the railroads. The railroad tradition of strangling the rivers, a short-sighted, unsound policy from the first, must be renounced. If the railroad executives will not voluntarily and wholeheartedly join in the revival of the rivers, the Government must step in and undertake the job itself. The vital work of developing the rivers and making them serve the country's urgent transportation needs is something the Government has the power and obligation to do. Counseling the railroads, in gentle words, to co-operate in river development is a characteristic Harding approach. If the President would occasionally show his teeth—if he would occasionally take the role of master instead of suppliant—his official way would be easier and he and the country would go faster and farther.

MANITOBA RENOUNCES PROHIBITION.

After a seven-year test of bone-dry prohibition the province of Manitoba has found it impracticable and adopted a plan, devised and supported by an organization called the Moderation League, for handing the sale of liquor for beverage purposes. The saloon is not restored. The idea of the Moderationist is to let the people have liquor in their homes, though this privilege is to be regulated, and if abused will be forfeited.

How the plan will work out remains to be seen. Probably it will develop weaknesses which experience will correct or minimize. One thing, however, is certain. Experience has demonstrated the impracticability of absolute prohibition in Manitoba and in other Canadian provinces. The same demonstration is taking place in the United States on a colossal and tragic scale.

SINCLAIR LEWIS BOOSTS.

"Let travel melt its patrons to the graces of internationalism. It is not going to seduce Sinclair Lewis. Who could have suspected the author of Babbitt, of all people, of such a patriotic flare-up as that which recently amazed a British audience? A London newspaper had said inconspicuously that Bohemia in that town was dropping its eccentricities because 'Americans and bank clerks have been imitating them.'"

Mr. Lewis thereupon registered rage. "This man," he said of the newspaper author, "is the kind of rotten little fool that makes Americans hate England when they want to love her! Such things as this are like the bacillus of some disease, which, although a very small thing, causes a tremendous upheaval in the organism." Then he crumpled the offending paper into a little ball.

But let us suppose the line had read: "Bank clerks and Babbitts have been imitating them." Would then the Gopher Prairie lion have raged? Yet Mr. Lewis has told the world that Babbitt is America.

The lapse of Mr. Lewis into patriotic fervor is most challenging. What is he planning to do—run for President? Does he want to become the idealized Percy Breckinridge rather than the unpoplar Miles Bjornstam of Sauk Center? Does he think more of America since his literary royalties have made him the owner of some of it? Or is he merely giving the British public a specimen of the theatricals and temperamental outburst which long-haired British lecturers have inflicted on American audiences at $2 the throw? Surely it is not the old Sinclair Lewis who puts on the armor of boost and battles for his cabbage patch.

CHARLES PARSONS PETTUS, GENTLEMAN.

"He was the politest man I ever knew," said a friend, paying tribute to the late Charles Parsons Pettus, whose tragic death deprived St. Louis of a rare type of man—so rare as to be conspicuous in these days when rough efficiency is a practiced art and brusque speech and slap-stick manners are supplanting the old standards.

It is true that Mr. Pettus was a model of politeness in the best sense of the phrase, in the sense that he exhibited in manner and speech a kindly regard for the comfort and happiness of others, carrying it to the smallest detail and the most delicate shade of courtesy. He was more than polite, his politeness was no mere polish, but sprung from sincere kindness. To paraphrase a sentence of Sarah Jewett in "Deephaven," he "was not polite for the sake of being polite, but polite for the sake of being kind." He was a gentleman in the finer and deeper meaning of the word—a man of education and honor, high principles, courtesy and kindness.

Of the gentlemen of the old school whose gracious presence and influence have blessed St. Louis, the nearest prototype of Mr. Pettus was James E. Yeatman, who was distinguished in public service and private life not only for his great heart, but for gentle speech and gentle manners. Like Mr. Yeatman, Mr. Pettus combined with sweetness and gentleness a keen sense of his obligations in all the relations of life. He delighted to serve his fellow men whenever opportunity offered. He did not seek honor, but accepted service.

No one came in contact with the man and felt the charm of his modest self-effacement, his kindly deference and gracious courtesy, who was not the better for the experience. Thereafter he had in mind the image and remembrance of a gentleman.

So long as the Goltra fleet is carrying freight instead of collecting rust the courts can take their time in settling the justice of it.

INDIANS WANT TRIBAL SCHOOLS.

Members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes of Indians of Haskell County, Oklahoma, have issued an appeal, in a resolution adopted in conference, that the United States Government do not devote the entire proceeds of the funds derived from the coal and asphalt deposits on Indian lands to a distribution per capita, but that $5,000,000 of such funds be set apart for the improvement and perpetuation of the Indian academy at Tusahoma, Harshorne and Millerton, Okla.

The conference represented a minority, and it is doubtful if its appeal can accomplish anything. In order to save the tribal schools, an amendment of the treaty providing for final settlement of these Indian claims appears to be needed. However, the champions of the schools have made a pathetic and powerful argument, which ought to win much sympathy for their cause. That they need schools is evident from the oddly awkward language of the resolution. One argument for the tribal schools advanced by the conference is that they would be a lasting memorial of old times, preserving precious memories and traditions.

These Indians fear, too, that if their children are forced to attend the white public schools, as they must do if their own schools are abolished, race prejudice might handicap them, in spite of the fact that the State Constitution classes them as whites. They cite cases where this has happened elsewhere.

These are not the days for wiping out schools. If those schools are well and efficiently conducted, and of reducing all education to a cold, hard standard. If there is real merit in the Choctaw and Chickasaw appeal, Congress should do what it can to satisfy these appellants. At any rate, the plea should be given a careful hearing.

"THERE isn't anything in history equaling the plight of France," Mr. Antwerp said. "She has a bear by the tail. This isn't the first bear to be caught in that way, but it is the biggest."

The French are afraid of the Germans, as they have reason to be. Germany is the larger and more powerful country. She was only conquered by an alliance of powerful countries—America and the other countries, England and America, have gone home.

"So France stands alone before Germany—facing Germany's vengeance. It is as inevitable as death."

The French know that. They know that whereas the sympathy of the world was with them when France was the under dog, it must ultimately be with Germany, displaced by the allies and then oppressed by France.

They are her reaction to a realization as vivid with her as to us that a day of reckoning is coming.

"How can France be saved? Not by the policy of Poincaré, which seeks to destroy Germany. France is not powerful enough to destroy Germany, and we have seen how far the allies are willing to go with her upon such an enterprise."

"There is but one way. It is as well the one way in which Germany can be saved from the consequence of again revenging herself upon France. Happily, there are both Frenchmen and Germans who see this. They suggest an economic alliance between France and Germany."

"Impossible!" you exclaim.

"Let us not be too sure of it. The agony of these countries is very great, and it is out of suffering that understanding comes."

"Don't forget that the choice is between this and another war. Neither France nor Germany wants another war," Mr. Antwerp said.

One wonders if the keen eyes of the Kieleses can see that their very objection to the Jews has become their objective. They must reason thusly: "The Jews think they are the chosen people. They are sufficient unto themselves. Good Jews do not marry outside the pale. They give their brother Jews the preference in business. Ergo they amass great wealth."

It is their claimantness that the klan objects to, and true to form they set about generating a claimantness of their own, with a capital "K" and an intermittent "T" to prove they are "the Lord's Anointed." Verily with Mr. Ford's help they could out-wall Wall Street!

VIOLA GRAVES.

Sir: What Edison said not long ago about the increasing complexity of life due to the many new inventions and discoveries was right to the point.

Then when travel by air became as common as the idea of utilizing the celestial canopy as a means of keeping one's eye on the auto traffic, another on the pretty girls and a third on the much too solid rainfall from heaven!

Some unworldly genius recently conceived the idea of utilizing the celestial canopy as a billboard for display advertising, and this may result in some interesting complications. The recent attempt to paint the sky with letters of smoke by day will probably be followed by others to illuminate it with letters of fire by night.

If the latter should prove successful we may expect to read some such notice as the following in the court news of the day: "The All Bunk Advertising Co. vs. The Alca Hall Bitters Co. The All Bunk Co. claims to have the exclusive privilege of using the skyboard between the hours of 9 and 10 p. m. and asks damages from the defendant for infringement and trespass."

Fifty years from now the comparatively few people who have managed to keep outside the "funny house" will probably find their time fully occupied in caring for and restraining the vast majority who are on the inside looking out. Complexity, did Edison say? He should have increased the voltage and made it unfounded, compounded complexity.

In 1893 a bill was introduced in the Kansas Legislature appropriating money for drilling four deep holes in the ground "to see what can be found."

Nobody else has worked both ways like the Kansas.

THE CYNIC.

In grim inquiry the fringed storm hours
But fearful mutterings on land and sea.
But I who know not Time nor minion Hours—
What are these splutterings to me?

I know no self or creature more than this
That flouts the elements, of which, a grain
He gads about and in eternal blues
Flies in men's eyes so pleased—to cause them pain.

MIGHT IN PLACE OF RIGHT.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

THERE must be something seriously wrong with the world. Not a day passes but a voice is heard crying in alarm and calling on the nations to other paths than the ones they are traveling.

Lloyd George is among those who have joined in the chorus, and on Sunday, in London, he led the congregation of Westbourne Park Church that force seemed to be the only power in which the nations of Europe now believed, and that might rather than right was the gospel of government.

He urged religion to battle itself and introduce a different temper into the dealings of mankind, otherwise there was the peril of the present civilization being swept away as destruction of the past were. A critical person might retort to Mr. Lloyd George that much of the responsibility for the disturbed state of Europe is his, but even a belated and unofficial voice of things as they are is probably to be commended. At least Mr. Lloyd George did not let his share of the middle. Undoubtedly many men view with alarm the continuing growth, malice, spite and hatred which the war has upon mankind, and all such, whether in public forum, will deserve well of their fellows if they can make the world realize that it is in some good, and stands in need of moral and religious reformation.

PUBLIC OPERATION OF INDUSTRIES.

From the Baltimore Sun.

BOOKHART of Iowa is making a fight for Government ownership and operation of railroads. The United Mine Workers are making a fight for Government operation of coal mines.

Overnight from all his previous protests against Government in business, comes out footed for Government in shipping. These three elements toward more taxes and an increase in the number of jobholders. Conservatives everywhere will deplore the President's change of heart.

In principle he has gone over to exactly the opposite conception of government as that opposed by radicals in his party and elsewhere. And the principle of government is not only unusual, but it is directly contrary to everything that the American people have stood for since the beginning of this republic.

AMERICAN LEGION IN POLITICS.

From the Nation.

IN announcing an essay contest for public school children the American Legion is returning to its assumption—so much in evidence a few years ago—that it is a part of the government of the United States. The Legion says that all essays must be received at a place designated by the County Superintendent of Schools.

Who is asked to select three judges to pick out the best manuscript submitted. The essay contest is a part of the Legion's campaign to have the national flag in every school.

It is then "asked to select three judges to pick out the best manuscript submitted. The essay contest is a part of the Legion's campaign to have the national flag in every school."

THE MIDGET'S THIMBLE

The labor people say that the 12-episode play doesn't give the workers the same with their families; the midgets say that even if the workers spend more time to themselves they don't spend it with their families. The truth probably is this: the people want to get as much as possible for as little money as possible. The workers want to get as much as possible for as little work as possible. The rest of it, it seems to me, is the midget's thimble.

Out of the midget's thimble, like a man—one man—and he is thousands more like him. His name is Joe. He came to this country from Ireland. He was big and strong and he was a good worker. He was heard there were big midgets made here. He left a wife and family in Ireland. He had a little money and he was a good worker. He was heard there were big midgets made here. He left a wife and family in Ireland. He had a little money and he was a good worker.

Twelve, hours of work. After 12 hours of hard work in the fields he was tired and he was hungry. He was heard there were big midgets made here. He left a wife and family in Ireland. He had a little money and he was a good worker. He was heard there were big midgets made here. He left a wife and family in Ireland. He had a little money and he was a good worker.

REALISM THE KEYNOTE OF CURENT PICTURES

"Quinty Adams Sawyer" and "All the Brothers Were Valiant" Have Remarkable Casts.

QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER, the current feature at the Grand Central Lyric Skydome and Capitol has a remarkable cast of character actors whose individual work gives distinction to a none too skillful adaptation of the novel.

The leading roles are portrayed by such well and favorably known players as Blanche Sweet, Barbara de la Marr, Lon Chaney, Elmo Lincoln, Louis L. Loring, Victor Potel, Louise Fazenda and Harry Depp. As might be expected with such an array of stars the acting of the story outweighs its dramatic content.

In plot, as adapted for the screen, it is rather elemental. A young lawyer arrives in a little country town to settle an estate for a widow, whose daughter, a village wench, tries to ensnare him into matrimony. The jealousy of a country swain is made the excuse for all sorts of villainous plots to get rid of the young lawyer. Lon Chaney, playing with little or no make-up, gives a most impressive characterization of the small town villain who uses a giant blacksmith for a tool in his plotting.

Miss Angela Frances Small, who has the appealing role of the blind girl who comes into the life of the young lawyer. There is a big thriller for a climax when the girl, sightless and helpless, is set adrift on a ferry boat which is swept toward a waterfall. The hero rescues her and it is found that the excitement has restored her sight.

On the bill also is Buster Keaton in his latest comedy, "The Frozen North." Bartram and Saxton offer Betty Compson as a Change Artist. The versatility of Betty Compson is exploited to the utmost in "The Woman With Four Faces," the leading picture offering at the Missouri.

This is a lurid melodrama story, the action of which mainly concerns itself with the breaking up of a "dope ring." The course of the play Miss Compson portrays four characters of different ages. She is in turn, a young woman of the "Raffles" type, a mother well past middle age, a social butterfly and an investigator for the district attorney. Some of the changes are so startling that it is difficult to believe these widely different roles are being taken by the same actress.

One of the big punches in the picture is the slaying of a convict. Another is the capture of the victim of Betty by a Japanese villain. It is frankly a piece designed for thrills. Richard Dix has the leading masculine role.

Sam Ash, tenor, is also on the bill and takes a special program of organ music by Stuart Barrie. A Quick-Moving Sea Story. REMARKABLE realism, fine marine views and melodramatic action abound in "All the Brothers Were Valiant" at the Demolition.

The strong cast includes Lon Chaney, Billie Dove, Malcolm McGregor, Robert McKim and other good players, including as fine a lot of extras as was ever got together to make a movie ship. The story turns about two brothers, one a master of a whaling ship, the other a desperate adventurer on the high seas, who discovers a treasure in pearls and foment a mutiny on his brother's vessel when the whaler refuses to permit the use of the ship to go after the treasure.

There are realistic scenes showing the running down and capture of a whale. The mutiny is remarkably well staged. There also are thrilling fights with natives and a climax where the need for concerted action in saving a young woman in distress brings about a reconciliation of the brothers.

Pierre and Pagie, the latter a St. Louis girl, give a charming stage presentation of pantomime dances. An Ex-Convict on the Diamond. THE offering at the Rivoli is a frankly "sensational" picture, "Trifling With Honor," Rockliffe Fellowes, Fritz Ridgeway and Buddy Messenger have the leading roles. The story requires some stretch of imagination. We are to suppose that a man who has just escaped from a penitentiary—a real bad man who has gloried in the title of "the Gaspipe Kid"—has no difficulty in breaking into professional baseball game just in time to take part in a championship game.

He is still at heart a crook and he listens with eager ears when a proposition is made to him to throw the game for money. Then along comes an adoring manager boy, played by "Buddy" Messenger. The boy has such great faith in his admiration and is so open in his admiration that it sets the ex-convict to thinking. He concludes that it is better to be a man who has just escaped from a penitentiary—a real bad man who has gloried in the title of "the Gaspipe Kid"—has no difficulty in breaking into professional baseball game just in time to take part in a championship game.

"PRINCE OF PILSEN" SETS OPERA RECORD

Receipts During Week Exceeded $35,000 and Attendance Was More Than 57,000.

The receipts for the seven performances of "The Prince of Pilsen" at the Municipal Theater exceeded $35,000, and the attendance for the week was more than 57,000, according to figures not yet revised by accountants, which were made public today. The previous record for last summer's cycle, when $28,660 was received at the box office. This week played only six nights.

The increased attendance is to be attributed largely to the new amplification, the management believes. The 25 and 35 cent sections, considered undesirable until this year, were sold out for the last four performances of "The Prince of Pilsen."

The fifth week of the season begins tonight with a performance of "Die Fledermaus," considered the masterpiece of Johann Strauss.

Two "Pop" Concepts Dropped. The Symphony Society expects to remove its offices next week from the University Club Building to the Odeon, where a space of 750 square feet, on the third floor, is being converted into quarters for the organization.

The management announces that next season the number of "pop" concerts will be reduced from 20 to 18, omitting the two Sundays during Christmas holidays. This reduction will be utilized by Director Ganz for a visit to Los Angeles, where he will appear as soloist and guest conductor with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra.

He praised the international court as being the step necessary for the nation to take to prevent future wars. Rastoin said he rejoiced at the recent appeal from Washington that our international relations should be thrown into politics and that the people should give impartial and non-partisan consideration to such questions as the League of Nations and the world court. He expressed his regret at "evidence of wide difference among leaders of the party in power." In support of his argument Rastoin warned his audience that the government was planning for the next draft, the kind of loathing the soldiers should wear and the kind of weapons to be used.

"COAL SCUTTLE" BONNETS SEEN AT GRAND PRIX RACE

Reversion to Styles of 1830, Hoop Skirts and Covered Arms Seen in Fashion Display.

By the Associated Press. PARIS, June 25.—Summer styles were the feature yesterday at the Longchamps course during the running of the Grand Prix de Paris. It was the first day of brilliant sunshine of the season for a feature event at a French racecourse.

Summer furs of silver and blue fox and white monkey adorned the necks of the dainty Parisiennes, who, with cobwebbed stockings showing just a suspicion of the color of the skin beneath gowns of taffeta with ruchings and wearing "coal scuttle" bonnets, attracted more of the attention of the 200,000 persons who packed the great hippodrome than did the horses.

A reversion to the 1830 Louis Philippe styles—what Anglo-Saxons have been pleased to regard as early Victorian—also was noteworthy in the display. There were hoop skirts of filmy material, topped with immense waists of the same design, and miniature umbrellas called "Tom Thumb" shades.

Duck Gait, which had been the reigning color at the track during the spring season, had to give way before an avalanche of white and faded colors. Most conspicuous among the summer styles was the difference in the "decolette." Last year 90 per cent of Parisian women who watched the running of the Grand Prix de Paris, displayed arms bare to the shoulders. This year arms were covered.

MRS. ARTHUR CAPEL WEBS EARL OF WESTMORELAND

Third Marriage of Youngest Daughter of Lord Ribblesdale in Romance of the Hunt.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch. LONDON, June 15.—The wedding last week of the Hon. Mrs. Arthur Capel and the Earl of Westmorland in Brompton Oratory was the happy conclusion of a romance of the hunting field, for both have been riding a great deal to the Beaufort and Blankney packs of hounds. The bride is a beautiful woman; the Earl is tall and good looking. Highly popular with his friends, among whom is the Prince of Wales, the Earl is a direct descendant of the first Earl of Westmorland, who married a granddaughter of Henry III.

The Countess of Westmorland is the youngest daughter of Lord Ribblesdale, so she is the stepdaughter of the former Mrs. John Astor and the niece of Mrs. Aquith, the first Lady Ribblesdale having been that very well-known lady's sister.

It was difficult to believe that

(Copyright, 1933, by the Press and Publishing Co., Inc., New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 25.—Detectives again raided the offices of the Daily Herald, organ of the Labor party. The first visit was Friday night, when the officers confiscated all copies of a photograph of the new giant submarine, X-1, which the paper had printed, and all unsold copies of the issue containing it. Saturday night they inspected the ledger, presumably in an effort to find out from whom the original picture was obtained.

DIZZY SPELLS SHORT BREATH HEART PALPITATION

Symptoms of High Blood Pressure

Dizziness, palpitation, oppressive fullness in the chest and labored breathing on slight exertion are among the first symptoms of a dangerously high blood pressure. If unheeded, the body loses tone, one's life is shortened and there is danger that death may come suddenly through apoplexy.

High Blood Pressure is in itself a symptom, for it usually indicates that the body is clogged and choked with poisonous wastes. Before relief can be had, these wastes must be eliminated. It was for just such conditions that Bi-a-lin was first prepared by a well-known physician.

Bi-a-lin assists in driving these poisons out of the body and lowering blood pressure in Nature's own way. Bi-a-lin is mild, pleasant and harmless in its action and brings a wonderful new feeling of vigor and power almost at once. Such remarkable results have been reported in the most obstinate cases that Bi-a-lin has now been put up in convenient form and is sold by all good druggists such as Enderle Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Bros. Co., Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. Drug Co.

FORGOTTEN, MAN LIES 13 DAYS IN POLICE CELL

Inquiry Discloses That He Was Accused of Taking Can Partially Full of Paint.

The law moves majestically whether a man be charged with murder or with taking a can of paint three quarters full, as is Fred Schuesler, 38 years old, a houseman formerly employed by Joseph McLain of 4223 Plymouth avenue.

A desk sergeant at Police Headquarters discovered by accident this morning that Schuesler was in the holdover and had been there since June 12. How he came there and why he was held appeared to be one of the mysteries of our metropolitan police system.

Investigation disclosed that Schuesler was arrested on June 11 on complaint of McLain, who said he missed the paint from his cellar after his houseman had cleaned out the place. Two detectives were assigned to the case and after a grilling cross-examination they wrung from Schuesler an admission that he took the paint and gave it to an ice man.

Schuesler was sent to the Page Avenue Station and soon was sent to headquarters while detectives sought to clear up the case. They found the ice man, who admitted that the houseman had given him the paint. His house seemed freshening a bit, and he couldn't spare the money, he said, so when his friend offered assistance it was thankfully received. The threads of the crime thus fairly well gathered the police applied to prosecuting attorney Schuesler for a warrant.

It needed only an instant for an Assistant Prosecuting Attorney to see that all the requisite information about the theft was not on hand, so the detectives were sent back for a full description of the paint—brand, label, specific gravity and surface strength. Meanwhile Schuesler, who does not stand these hot days as well as formerly, occupied a cell at headquarters and ate sausage and drank water.

A warrant was issued Saturday charging Schuesler with petty larceny. As he has no money, he must stay in jail until brought to trial.

He told a Post-Dispatch reporter the following story today:

"Mrs. McLain wanted the cellar cleaned. She said to throw out everything on the shelves as she didn't want the empty paint cans and bottles. I cleared out this stuff and ran across a can three-fourths full of paint. It seemed a shame to throw it away, I knew the ice man had a little house that needed fixing up, and I gave him the paint. Mrs. McLain asked me about it and when I told her I had given him the can, she ordered me to get it back. I tried, but couldn't find my friend at home. Then detectives came and arrested me."

Mrs. McLain give a different version over the telephone:

"Fred worked for us about a year and we trusted him. I understand he sold the paint for $1. Of course, I'm really sorry he has had to stay in jail so long, but he did take the paint, you know."

NAVY TO TRY TEACHING RADIO TO STUDENTS WHILE THEY SLEEP

Specialty Designed Receiving Sets to Be Strapped to the Ears of the Slumbers.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 25.—"Learn while you sleep," will be the routine advertisement of up to date educational institutions if the experiments now being conducted by the navy produce results commensurate with the hopes of some of its instructors.

According to an official announcement issued yesterday, embryonic radio operators at the Pensacola, Fla., air station are to be taught the intricacies of wireless after they have been tucked in their regulation cots. Specially designed receiving sets will be strapped to the ears of the slumbers and throughout the still watches of the night data and formulas will be poured, pushed and pounded into more or less receptive brains, at least so the announcement states.

A skeptical official in the department whose opinion was sought remarked that the process might work in the case of certain backward pupils who had failed to respond to any scheme employed during their waking hours.

Mrs. Sadie Kilpatrick, 57, of 4084 Eastern avenue, suffered a fractured hip and internal injuries when knocked down by an automobile after alighting from a street car at Warne and Eastern avenues at 9 p. m.

George Tremel, 37, of 2365 Dodder street, suffered concussion of the brain and scalp wounds when an automobile in which he was riding collided with a light pole near Florissant avenue and Broadway at noon.

The Secret of Having Beautiful Hair

Beautiful hair—hair that is soft and silky—adds more than anything else to your attractiveness and charm. Beautiful hair is not a matter of luck, it is simply a matter of care. You can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly. Proper shampooing is what brings out all the real life and lustre, the natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali in ordinary soap, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why leading motion picture stars and millions of women, everywhere, use Mulsified Coconut Oil Shampoo.

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified Coconut Oil Shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a four ounce bottle lasts for months.

Simple Home Remedy for Wrinkled Faces

Thousands of the fair sex are spending fortunes in frantic efforts to remove the signs of premature age from their faces. Such women willingly pay almost any amount of money for worthless wrinkle removers, of which there are many.

If they only knew it, the most effective remedy imaginable is a simple, harmless lotion which can be made up at home in less than a minute. They have only to get an ounce of pure powdered azoanite and half a pint of witch hazel at the drug store and mix the two. Apply this daily for a while as a refreshing face wash. The effect is almost magical. Even after the first treatment a marked improvement is noticed and the face has a snug, firm feeling that is most pleasing.

HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION MAY ABANDON TAG DAY

Board Recommends That It
Join Community Fund, Which Guarantees $60,000 the First Year.

The executive board of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association has recommended to its members that the organization join the Community Fund, thus eliminating street solicitation.
A. L. Shapleigh, president, has called a meeting at the Noonday Club for 4 p. m. July 10, for a vote on a proposed change in the constitution to enable the organization to take this step. If the plan is adopted the association will be the second large charitable organization recently to enter the Community Fund and eliminate tag days or street solicitation, the Red Cross having taken similar action.
In a letter to the members of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, Shapleigh points out that this arrangement would save the cost of a separate Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association campaign and would relieve those who have been accustomed to do the work.

He added that to join the Community Fund, which will guarantee to the association $60,000 the first year and $30,000 a year additional thereafter until $75,000 is reached, would prevent loss of efficiency and duplication of effort.
To Retain Autonomy.
The Executive Board took this action at a meeting June 17 on a proposal from the Community Fund.
Under this plan, the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association will retain its autonomy and will keep up its membership. The money received from the Community Fund will be distributed to the hospitals doing charity work, as has been done heretofore, Shapleigh says in his letter. He adds that, under the proposal, contributors to the Community Fund may designate the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association as the beneficiary of their donations should they so desire.

Should members of the Hospital
Saturday and Sunday Association concur in the recommendation of the Executive Board, they will continue their annual dues of $2.
Purchasing Bureau Established for Community Council.

A Central Purchasing Bureau has been established as a department of the Community Council, Central National Bank building, to save money for the member agencies of the council in the purchase of their supplies, which includes all sorts of articles necessary for institutional and social service work.

Arnold Guyot, former purchasing agent for the Southwestern Division of the Red Cross, is manager of the bureau. He returned recently from a tour of large cities having similar bureaus, the methods of which he studied. In his opinion savings of 10 to 15 per cent in the buying of goods will be possible here by the centralized method.

Statement By Burlingham.
Dr. L. H. Burlingham, administrator of Barnes Hospital and acting chairman of the General Purchasing Bureau, in a statement today said:
"The plan for the Central Purchasing Bureau is a development of the plan of the Community Council whereby a variety of centralized services are offered which save the member charities and philanthropies money and effort and enable them to do their work more effectively and more economically. Any expenditure in the central office is many times counterbalanced by the saving to the member organizations and by the added efficiency which their work gains through co-operation."

"The bureau will be available to all of the 26 charitable and philanthropic organizations which made up the Community Council, without charge. They will send in to the bureau, on special order forms, their orders for any supplies which they want purchased; the bureau will arrange for the purchase, with delivery and billing direct to each organization concerned."

Charities Interested.
"Special interest is being shown in the establishment of the Central Purchasing Bureau by the 45 charities and philanthropies which make up the Community Fund, which raises their money by a combined annual financial campaign. These organizations are seeing quite clearly that it is just as desirable to save $100,000 by centralized and combined purchasing as it is to raise an extra $100,000 through a financial campaign."

"Although the Central Purchasing Bureau is a department of the Community Council, which has no official connection with the Community Fund, the Budget Committee and Executive Committee of the Community Fund were glad to allow a budget for the Central Purchasing Bureau in the belief that it would effect a large saving and that contributors would be delighted to have this added means for efficiency, so that each dollar they contribute will go farther and render more service than otherwise would be the case."

"The plan for the Central Purchasing Bureau is receiving the enthusiastic approval of merchants, who would much rather send their salesman to one central bureau than to 26 separate organizations. They are willing to pass on to the organizations these savings which can be made by economy in selling costs, in delivery and in billing."

50,000 Partners In the Business of Serving the Public

This large number of men and women represent the "Louisville & Nashville Family"—an organization whose members are working shoulder to shoulder in the important business of providing safe, efficient and economical transportation for the territory served.

From the boy who carries water for the construction gang, to the chief engineer; from the track-walker to the general manager; from the call-boy to the mechanical superintendent; from the ticket seller to the traffic manager; from the freight clerk to the general freight agent; from the youngest clerk in the auditing, purchasing and legal departments to the comptroller, the chief counsel and the executive head—this big family of L. & N. employees appreciates, individually and collectively the work in which they are engaged, and they work out the problems of their duties not simply to the end of earning a livelihood, but for the satisfaction that comes with having had a part in the building of this great Nation.

Loyalty, courtesy, on-the-job efficiency and team-work are the four sterling qualities which have made possible the building of this property. Every employee of the L. & N. Railroad, from the president to the humblest clerk, looks on his or her individual job as a vitally important one in the general operation of the Road, and feels that in the performance of his or her duty, a distinct service to the community and the country as a whole—as well as to the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company—is being rendered.

In order that these employees and the public in general may know, in detail, more of this great industry of transportation; in order that they may be informed as to the progress made by this and other railroads; and in order that they may gain an insight into the future of the Country by knowledge of its past progress—the Louisville & Nashville Railroad has just issued

"A Book About The L. & N."

This book is complete and interesting, and a copy will be placed in the hands of every employee or other person who desires one. The management feels that this book will be carefully read by every one of the 50,000 L. & N. partners in the business of serving the public; and that in addition, the readers of this newspaper will find much to interest them in the pages of this book. The suggestion is therefore made to any one desiring a copy of the book, that upon request of any official of the L. & N., it will be forwarded without charge.

MAN KILLS TWO GIRLS AND HIMSELF AT PICNIC

Kentuckian Shoots Daughter and Her Young Companion, and Wounds Three Other Persons.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 25.—William Zimmerman, 35 years old, caused panic among nearly 50 persons at a picnic given by a church club on the banks of the Ohio River near here yesterday, by killing his daughter, 15 years old, a girl companion, 14, and wounding another girl, 21. A few minutes later, when about to be captured, he turned a pistol on himself and sent a bullet through his head.

Friends of Zimmerman say he objected to his daughter going with young men and that this may have been the motive for the slaying. He is said to have warned his daughter several times not to go to the picnic.

The dead besides Zimmerman are, Mamie Zimmerman, 15 years old, his daughter, and Sara Connolly, 14.

Thomas Mullany, 18, Charles Kiefer, 14, and Gertrude Franconia, St. Matthews, Ky., were wounded. The body of Miss Connolly, who was shot while near the river bank, fell into the water and floated down stream. The body was recovered by fishermen this morning.

The daughter was shot twice through the head and died almost instantly. A bullet struck Kiefer in the face and inflicted a flesh wound. Mullany, who was wounded in the shoulder, grappled with Zimmerman after he had shot his daughter.

All the wounded are expected to recover. Armed with two revolvers and about 90 rounds of ammunition, Zimmerman left his soft drink stand here and was driven to the scene of the picnic in a taxicab. After only a few words with his daughter he began shooting. He fired 12 shots at the young people, who were in the water and on the bank of the river. The driver of the taxicab, said Zimmerman appeared to be sober.

Zimmerman, who has a police record, and whose brother is serving a life term for murder in the State reformatory at Frankfort, Ky., before leaving for the river told his stepson-in-law, C. T. Luckert, "I am going to kill five kids this afternoon." Luckert said he attempted to reach the picnic before Zimmerman, but was too late.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION GROWS

Over Half of American Doctors Are Members, Report Shows.

By the Associated Press.
SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—The American Medical Association has a membership of 58,513 physicians out of the approximately 100,000 in the United States, Dr. Olin West, secretary of the association, reported to the House of Delegates meeting today.

The council on Medical Education and Hospitals expressed the opinion that from 80 to 90 per cent of all cases of illness can be treated successfully by general practitioners, and that 90 per cent of all patients can be cared for efficiently in their homes or in physicians' offices without the need of a hospital.

It was suggested that modern medical knowledge and practice can be furnished to the entire public, if citizens of rural communities will guarantee the physician an income of $2,500 or more each year for a term of five years.

ESCAPED CONVICT FATALLY SHOT

By the Associated Press.
MARQUETTE, Mich., June 25.—Capture of George Natchos, escaped convict from Marquette prison, yesterday ended one of the most desperate fights ever made by a man for liberty from the Upper Michigan branch prison. Natchos was shot 14 times by a posse which had been hunting him since last Monday. He died a few minutes after reaching the hospital. The escaped convict was surrounded in a swamp near Perkins, between Maple Ridge and Escanaba. The members of the posse raised the underbrush with volleys after volleys of shots. Natchos replied at first with fire from his own weapon, but later the firing from the brush ceased.

Natchos was sentenced from Pontiac for life imprisonment on a charge of murder.

LONDON, June 25.—Mrs. Nadj-da Stancioff of Bulgaria has resigned her appointment as First Secretary at her country's legation in Washington. She was the first woman appointed to such an important diplomatic post, but had had considerable diplomatic experience, although she is only 28. Her father is Bulgarian Minister at London and during his recent absence she has held sole charge of the legation here.

She was also on the Bulgarian delegations to the Lausanne and Geneva conferences, where she amazed foreigners by her fluency in French, Italian, Russian, German, English and Bulgarian. "I am unable to discuss the reasons for my resignation," she told the correspondent. Her father was a supporter of the slain Premier, Stambouliaky.

A Puzzling Question

By Winifred Black.

Copyright, 1923, By Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.
HERE, girls, is a letter from an old-fashioned man, who's looking for an old-fashioned sweetheart. And he saw a girl in a cheap little shop and something about her made him feel as if he had just been to church and had a glimpse of a saint.

He thought—but here's his letter—read it for yourself.
"Dear Winifred Black: I was in an Italian grocery this morning. A young Italian woman came in to buy something. Such beauty in a woman I have very seldom seen, outside of my own mother—beauty of soul, of character!
"Her jet black hair was combed in a lovely way, yet plain. Such a sweet, pure face! I felt as if I was in the presence of something divine.
"The grocer told me later that she had been but a short time in the United States, was only 19 years old and the mother of a 3-months-old baby.

"Somehow, when I left that store, the day seemed a little brighter and the sunshine a little warmer.

"I have yet to meet the modern American girl between 18 and 25 years of age that will bring tears to my eyes. The kind of beauty I look for in a woman isn't acquired in a drug store or a clothes shop.

"NOT CYNICAL, NOT PREJUDICED."

How would you like to be the girl who inspired such a letter from such a man?

Oh, you needn't laugh, little Miss Flossie Frizzle—that man thinks more of that young woman this minute than any half-dozen of your "classy sweeties" think of you if you put them all together and added them up in a bunch.

Life's Sane Roads.

And she's married at that—and he's glad of it, and he envies her husband and wishes he could find a girl something like her to walk through life with him hand in hand.

I must say, I don't blame him.

I don't think that this young man is any great exception to the rule, either.

Two young fellows from one of our greatest American universities told me the same sort of story the other day.

They'd been on a hunting trip and up in the mountains they had stayed for two days with a plain Swedish farming family.

And the daughter of the house was tall and blonde and blue-eyed, and she was rosy and smiling, and she took care of her little brothers and sisters and churned the cream and made butter and she made all her own dresses and her mother's and her little sister's dresses—yes, she even made shirts for her little brothers and thought nothing of it, and she could cook, and she could sing, too, and play upon the zither or some sort of old-fashioned stringed instrument. She was like a breath of fresh, clean air to those two American college boys!

They can't forget her, and one of them declares that he is going back up into the mountains and ask that girl to marry him and come down to the city and help to keep him in the sane roads of life.

But he's afraid the old Swedish father won't see things in the right light—he doesn't like "city fellows" and he'd rather have his daughter marry a farmer and grow up to be the same sort of woman as her mother before her.

What's the matter, girls?

Also, I know a young American who sent over to France a year ago had brought his French sweetheart over here and married her—and their best, quiet, charming little home and their ideal home life is the envy of their young American friends. This French girl thinks first of her husband, then of her home and after that perhaps of the movies and jazz.

What's the matter, girls? Are we Americans too clever or too nervous, or what is it that is making American men begin to look with longing eyes at the girls born and brought up in a different tradition from ours?

A Wife's "Allowance"

Copyright, 1923.

By SOPHIE IRVINE LORR.

AMOTHER of four children is in a great dilemma as to whether she should go out to work and have her four children, since the allowance her husband makes seems to her insufficient.

She states the situation as follows:

"My husband gives me $30 a week to run the home on.

Out of that, I set my table, pay for the children's music (three children take lessons).

I pay $1.25 for insurance; buy anything that is needed in the line of clothes for four children, the oldest 14, the youngest 7. I pay the gas, electric and telephone bills, also care for the oldest child every day, and lunch one day a week. I also give them Sunday school, church and spending money. I can't seem to make the reach. My husband claims there is something wrong.

"Now, will you please tell me how I can manage in order to make it reach? I have tried my best and can't, and it has me discouraged, as I love my husband and children and my home, but I am losing heart in the home and am tempted to leave it and go out and work.

"Everybody advises me not to, as they say everything will go to pieces, as there are not many housekeepers to hire. Also the children need their mother."

If the conditions are as she describes, I am confident this mother is making every dollar stretch its limit. In fact, I don't see how she does it, and, as she says, is able to carry on everything "sleazy."

I would like very much if it were possible for this husband to take the $30 and see how far he would get with it. I venture to say if he had the management of this sum a week, the children would not look the same and it would be a different kind of a home.

Of course, when one has only $30 to use in a home of this kind they have to do without a great many things—perhaps the real necessities of life, where six people are concerned.

There are families who are living on a great deal less, but they are eking out a pathetic existence, rather than living.

But what this woman is trying to get at is the fact that her husband could afford to give her more and won't do it because he has an idea she does not need any more.

This is a wrong theory. This mother is probably doing her best to pinch and scrape in order to come within the amount he gives her and it is quite natural that she should be discouraged.

Any wife who does her best in such a case and is still unappreciated when she has saved every place she possibly can in order to help her husband, and he thinks she is a spendthrift—this is enough to make any woman want to go out and earn for herself.

If the truth were known, this husband, in order to get the same work done for his children that his wife does now, would have to pay about $15 a week just for that service, as housekeepers are being paid today. He would not only have to board this woman, but pay for everything else besides, and how he would manage with $15 that would be left out of the $30, to clothe and feed and pay for music lessons for three children, to say nothing of electric, telephone and gas bill is more than he could say or anyone else.

Such a doubting Thomas of a husband needs an awakening, and I think a very rude one. He ought to try it himself. His one hold on such a mother is because of her mother love. She will suffer anything rather than leave her children.

Of course, the allowances of wives differ in accordance with the income. What is a luxury to one is a necessity to another. No man who can afford it should put his wife to such trials as this woman sets forth. As head of the family it is his duty to see to it that the scrapping and saving is not on one side of the partnership in the making of a home.

How to Care for Carpets and Rugs During the Summer

BY WANDA BARTON

RUGS are expensive and they must have the right kind of care if they are to give us our money's worth in wear.

They should be cleaned thoroughly before storing, then spread out and covered on the right side with clean newspapers which have been sprinkled with gasoline, turpentine or benzine, as a protection against moths. The liquid evaporates and the odor left is but slightly noticed when they are spread in the fall.

Roll the rugs on a light stick or pole, as tightly as possible, then cover with heavy wrapping-paper, sealing the edges smoothly with liquid glue. Now they are ready to send to cold storage, or if a dry, cool cellar is available, swing the rolls from the ceiling by heavy cords and the rugs will keep in excellent shape.

Mending rugs and carpets may be done at home, but it is a heavy job to handle and the professional menders are fair in their charges and do wonderful work.

If carpets must be cut and fitted, then in sewing the seams the over-hand stitch is used. Regular carpet tread and curved needles come for the purpose. Curved carpet scissors are also needed for the work.

Rebinding is accomplished by laying two or three heavy cords along the edge and darning them down with an over and under stitch, then covering the re-reinforced edges with a regular rug-binding. This method gives the same finish which the Oriental rugs have. In cleaning, rugs should never be snapped when shaken, as that breaks the threads and makes them ragged long before they should give out at the edges. It is wiser to vacuum clean them, then wipe the surface over lightly with a linen cloth wrung out of strong ammonia water.

Women who are making the hand-locked rugs are doing some wonderfully lovely ones—thanks to their newly-found intimacy with the home dye-pot. New potato-sacking out in the desired size is stretched tightly on a frame and the design is sketched, or stenciled, on it. Then with the small wooden handled hooks the work begins. All rough ends are brought to the right side, where the eventual trimming takes care of them. A strip of rag is taken in the left hand and a hook in the right. The hook is pushed down through the burlap, catching the rag, which it draws up through a quarter or half-inch. Then the hook is pushed down again about two threads away and the rag is drawn again, this time in a loop. Proceed in this way to the end of the strip. The rag cannot be sewed as in a braided rug.

After the surface is covered the rug is then clipped evenly, or just the uneven places are clipped and the loops are left. This is a matter of choice. The wrong side is smooth and firm—or should be—while the burlap at the edges is finished in a rolled invisible hem. It is a knack to make the rug, and many women begin with small ones of one or two colors to learn the trick.

In washing the cheap ready-made rag-rugs, do not wring them by hand, but flatly fold and run through a wringer if possible, or throw them over a line to drip until the excess water has run off. Then lay them down on a laundry-table and stretch them into perfect shape and let them dry, turning occasionally. If they are dried on a line, they stretch all out of shape, so that when placed on the floor they ruffle at the sides.

The choice of porch-rugs should depend upon the amount of exposure to the weather which they are likely to get—both sunny and rainy. Where rain may reach them, the sectional rugs are good, for the exposed sections may be lifted and moved back under protection. The colored rugs should be turned daily so that they may fade evenly and not in streaks which make them look shabby.

A feeling of resentment rose in Jean's breast. It had been on Douglas' account that she had incurred her grandfather's displeasure, been obliged to leave her mother's house. And now the man for whom she had done these things was chiding her for not going back.

"I shouldn't think of returning home," she said. "I've made up my mind to have a career." She was far too proud to explain that she could not go home without the stolen papers.

Douglas, looking at her flushed face, grew suddenly tender. "Don't bother about a career, Jean," he said. "Just marry me. You know I've always wanted you to."

There was a note of deep sincerity in his voice, at which Jean clutched eagerly. Douglas had asked her to marry him. It was the one thing in all the world she most wanted to do. And yet it seemed like surrender. Had he asked her just because she was helpless, alone? She steeled herself to reply in a matter-of-fact way she did not feel.

"Thank you, Douglas," she said. "It would no doubt be an easy way out of my difficulties, but I've got to work—to make a living. I'm going on the stage."

"Not in the chorus, I hope," he retorted, bitterly. "Why, when that underbred little runt spoke to you in the theater just now, it was all I could do to keep myself from punching him in the eye."

"No—not in the chorus, I hope. There's—there's a man who wants to write a play for me—a well-known playwright. I'm going to see him this morning." She had not meant to see Mr. Bernard, but she felt she ought to say something to justify herself.

Douglas squirmed uneasily in his seat. Was he planning all this because of the impending ruin of her grandfather? He felt himself in a large measure responsible.

"I'm not going ahead in that case against Mr. Carrington," he said. "I couldn't. I've turned the whole thing over to Mr. Blair. You were wonderful to bring those papers back to me, but I wish you hadn't done it. Caring for you as I do, you can see how I hate to take any action that will hurt you or your family. But there is the question of the public. It's a duty. Blair has got to go ahead. If you had only thrown that envelope in the fire."

Jean's resentment increased. Having done an unselfish thing, she wanted praise, not blame, for it.

"I did what I thought was right," she said. "I don't blame Mr. Blair or you either. I'm tired of living in an atmosphere of hypocrisy. That's why I got out—one reason." She still could not bring herself to tell him the real one. "I want to work—to do something real in the world. I think every woman should feel like that, don't you? Not just be a parasite."

"You wouldn't be a parasite if you married me."

"Yes, I should. You're just asking me this because you're sorry for me. I know. You think you are responsible for the trouble I'm in, and you want to make amends. It's nice of you, Douglas, but I can't marry you now."

"But—why not? I love you."

"I wonder." She gazed with unseeing eyes at the pattern in the rug beneath her feet.

"Of course I love you. I've always loved you. I want you to marry me—now. I haven't much to offer you," he went on, rather lamely, "but we could get along."

"No, Douglas," Jean said, steeling herself against a desire to throw herself into his arms. "I've started out now to earn my own living, and I want to make good."

"Are you doing this because you think your grandfather is about to be ruined? Have I brought that upon you?"

"No. My grandfather's ruin would not affect me—in a money way, that is. I'm not thinking about money. I just want to do something—to be a part of the real, workaday world—to feel that I'm more than just a woman."

"Then can't I help you?"

"I don't see how. I want to try the stage because it seems a quick and easy way to gain success. You don't know any stage people. I don't see how you could do anything."

He clenched his fists helplessly. "It's all wrong," he said. "The stage is a harder game than you think. It takes years of preparation. You'll fail, and it will make you wretchedly unhappy."

"Why should I fail?" Her pride rose at this. "I have good looks, intelligence, education. If Mr. Bernard writes a play for me—"

She hesitated, unwilling to tell him why Mr. Bernard was so eager to write her a play. Douglas voiced the question at once, jealousy flaming in his eyes.

"Why should a man like Bernard write a play for you? You're not known. You've had no experience. Is he just promising to do it in order to marry you—for your money?"

"Certainly not." Jean rose, indignant. "He's been as nice to me as anyone could be. He thinks I have looks, talent. After all, there are lots of women on the stage right now who haven't any asset but their personality. He's going to write me an easy part and teach me how to play it. Don't you think people would come to see me?" She challenged him with a look.

Douglas was silent. To tell the truth, he did not know what to say. Jean, in his eyes, was the one woman in the world. He could well imagine the public going to see her—adoring her flaming beauty.

"I—I hope you make a success of it," he muttered, gazing at her hungrily. "If you do, will you marry me then?"

Jean laid her hand on his arm. There was a very tender light in her eyes.

"You must come and ask me then," she said. "Now, I want you to take me to Mr. Bernard's office. It's in the Colonial Theater."

Douglas led her to the sidewalk in silence, called a cab. The whole thing seemed unreal to him, yet he could do nothing.

"Colonial Theater," he told the chauffeur, and sank back into his seat in grim silence.

The drive consumed but a few minutes. He left her at the theater door.

"I wish you'd chuck it," he said, gloomily, as they shook hands.

"I really can't, Douglas, dear. I'm going to win out and make you proud of me."

CHAPTER XX.

"THE PLAY'S THE THING."

MR. BERNARD'S office was a single room of moderate size, very simply furnished.

There was a good rug, a filing case, a big flat-topped desk littered with papers, a smaller desk for his secretary, and a leather-covered couch.

Mr. Bernard lived in Hackensack; his wife and two children saw him infrequently. They had a small house, with an acre or two of ground, and Mrs. Bernard spent her summers canning and preserving the various fruits and vegetables which she and her children spent the winter eating. It was not a very exciting existence, and she had urged her husband to do his writing at home, but he explained at considerable length that as a dramatist it was necessary for him to see all the new shows, to have a place in which to work uninterrupted by the demands of his children, the clubs, in order to keep in touch with the theatrical world. Mrs. Bernard, who was a sensible soul, saw in this a certain amount of logic; she did not enjoy being alone six evenings in the week, but she found compensation in the love of her children. She was quite certain that her husband was unfaithful to her; she knew that many women paid court to him, with the idea of securing parts in his plays, but she was resigned. Most men were unfaithful to their wives; it was a relief that he did not flaunt his amours in the eyes of her neighbors. These regarded her as an unusually lucky woman, the wife of a man whose name they could see at frequent intervals decorating ash trays, billboards, or the signs in front of theaters. She was the wife of a celebrity; it consoled her for many heartaches.

When Jean Bronson timidly opened the office door, Mr. Bernard was sitting at his desk going over the weekly box-office statements of one of his shows on the road. His stenographer, a slim, Jewish girl, was typing the manuscript of a new play. He glanced up with a frown, then, seeing who his visitor was, rose and laid down his cigarette.

"Miss Bronson," he said, smiling, "come right in. I hoped you would honor me with a call. I've got that scenario all ready to read to you."

He opened a drawer of his desk and drew out a thin manuscript. "It's called 'A Real Woman.' Don't you think? Sit down and I'll read it to you. Schreyer—he addressed his stenographer—"you might as well go and get your lunch. I'll be busy for an hour or so."

The secretary put on her hat and went out. Mr. Bernard was looking through the pages of his script.

The Bears Scare Peter Rabbit.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Alas, how many make the error Of finding fun in giving terror.

—Peter Rabbit.

THE three little Bears felt quite put out over having been so badly fooled by Mrs. Grouse, and they wanted to keep on hunting for the baby Grouse. It wasn't so much that they wanted to catch those babies to eat as it was that they wanted to get even with Mrs. Grouse. Mother Bear had said that it would be useless to hunt for them, but probably the three little Bears would have hunted had not one of them caught sight of Peter Rabbit. That put all thought of the baby Grouse out of their heads.

Peter had been sitting all the time close to a hole under a big old stump, and had seen the whole performance. It had tickled him greatly to see how cleverly Mrs. Grouse had fooled those three little Bears. How Peter did admire Mrs. Grouse for her smartness! But even more he had admired her for her bravery. You know, it took real bravery to flutter about the ground just barely out of reach of those eager little Bears. Peter always had admired Mrs. Grouse, but never as much as he now did.

It was Littlest Bear who spied Peter, and with a squeal she started for him. Of course, the other two little Bears were at her heels. The instant he saw that he was discovered, Peter dived down into that hole. He felt quite safe there. He knew that that hole was too small for even Littlest Bear to crawl in after him. He really wasn't scared a bit when he dived into that hole.

But in a moment or two he heard sounds that first made him nervous and then scared him. Those three little Bears were starting to dig him out. Yes, sir, that is just what they were doing. And they were having great fun doing it. Had there been just one little bear, Peter wouldn't have been much worried. He knew that little Bears, or big ones, too, for that matter, seldom stuck to one thing very long at a time. They soon grow tired and lose interest. But three made a different matter of it altogether. When one got scared. After a while he heard two or three loud sniffs, and then the sound of big claws at work. Mother Bear had arrived and begun digging! Peter shook all over. He crawled just as far down in that hole as he could get, and there he shivered and shook.

All the time that Peter was so badly scared, the three little Bears were having a wonderful time. They were very much excited. To them it was all great fun. They didn't once think of how Peter must be feeling, though it wouldn't have made any difference to them if they had thought of it. To them it was all a kind of a game. When Mother Bear began to dig, the three little Bears danced about, and got in the way, and were as excited as three small people could be. They didn't doubt for a minute that now they would catch Peter Rabbit.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Solving Several Perplexing Problems of the June Bride.

THE June bride is a needy sort of person, and sometimes we of greater experience wonder if her needs are all worth while.

In the first place, the trousseau should be planned with the idea of its suitability for the girl's future status and surroundings. In the second place, only just enough should be bought to cover the needs. The shops are going to still be in business, and it is much easier and better to buy a few things as the need arises than to have so many frocks that in a few months one must start to have them altered and made over. Fashions change so quickly that the only things that do not become old-fashioned are the comfy things and underwear.

The bride who is going right to housekeeping, after a brief trip, will need "homey" clothes, while the bride who is going to board will need more formal dresses. And the bride who is going to travel needs the smart tailored things that are suitable. The woman who spends a lot of money without due consideration is foolish and is likely to be inappropriately dressed in a very short time.

Girls have an idea that they should have a trousseau that should last a long time, as they hate to ask for new things right away. This is a grave mistake. The sooner a man realizes his responsibility the better. If no demands are made upon him while the experience is new he is surprised, and in some instances angry, when several demands come all together, as the needs have been allowed to accumulate.

This question of clothes is often the rock upon which the matrimonial ship is shattered, as the clothing needs, like the need of food and shelter, are continuous through life. They should be disposed of as quickly and with as little friction as possible. An allowance, a certain amount of credit at shops, or a deposit made in the bank for the purpose saves the humiliating need of asking for every small thing of the toilet that a woman may require. A perfect understanding in this matter cannot come too quickly. Whether 5 cents was needed last month or $500 are asked for next month has nothing to do with the case, if there is perfect harmony and understanding. The man who realizes that his wife is a woman of judgment will know that she has reasons for her requests.

The man should be perfectly frank in regard to his own income, and a girl who is wise will govern herself accordingly. If she loves him as she ought to, and will help to build up their bank credit instead of tearing it down. Perfectly healthy women who marry men on salaries or small incomes should make it their business to learn as quickly as possible to be first-class housewives and helpers. When they have learned this lesson thoroughly and to run their homes inside their income they may then turn around and see where they can help increase it. This a wife may do by a venture of her own or by aiding her husband to make a change for the better. While they are young is the time to take chances. It is in later years that the risk of failure is heartbreaking. Many a man says truthfully that it was his wife's courage that made his big start possible. It is these men as a rule who miss the divorce court experience that men of extravagant and spendthrift homes often drift into.

Marriage is a partnership—or should be—of the highest type. Each of the parties is working with a single object—that of righteous accumulation to reach a state of financial freedom that will allow them to do as they like and educate their children after their own ideals. So it is that we advise brides to supply themselves with things that are suitable—but in a limited quantity—so that the urge of providing for his family may begin before a man thinks his wife has an invisible supply for her needs and he has only himself to think about.
